

ADVERTISING & MARKETING AGENCY EDITION

100 PROMPTS

The Agency AI Toolkit

100 Plug-and-Play Prompts to Save 10+ Hours a Week

100

Ready-to-Use Prompts

10+

Hours Saved Weekly

0

Setup Required

Copy. Paste. Done. — No plugins, no code, no paid add-ons required.

Quick-Start Guide

How to use a prompt: Every prompt in this pack is copy-and-paste ready. Find the one you need, copy the text under "The prompt," replace anything in [BRACKETS] with your own client details, and paste the whole thing into ChatGPT or Claude. That's it, no special setup, no extra tools.

How to find a prompt in under 30 seconds: The fastest way is Ctrl+F (Windows) or Cmd+F (Mac) and typing a word related to your task, like "budget" or "onboarding." You can also click any entry in the Table of Contents below to jump straight to that prompt, or use your PDF reader's bookmark sidebar to browse by category. If you're not sure what to search for, start with the Category Index on the next page, it groups every prompt by the part of your job it supports.

3 rules for better results every time:

1. Add context. The more real detail you give the AI (actual client names, real numbers, real brand voice notes), the less generic the output will be. Vague input gets vague output.
2. Iterate, don't settle. If the first draft isn't quite right, tell the AI exactly what to change ("make this shorter," "more casual," "lead with the number instead"). Treat the first response as a draft, not a final answer.
3. Ask for variations. Almost every prompt in this pack can be followed with "give me 2 more versions" or "make this more [urgent/formal/playful]." You'll often like version 3 better than version 1.

Which AI tools these work with: Every prompt in this pack is written for the free or standard versions of ChatGPT or Claude. No plugins, no code, no API access, and no paid add-ons required. If a prompt mentions data or notes, you paste those in directly, the AI doesn't need to connect to anything.

A note on accuracy and compliance: AI-generated copy is a fast first draft, not a final, verified deliverable. Always fact-check any statistic, claim, or number before it goes in front of a client or into a live ad, and make sure any advertising claims about pricing, results, or guarantees can be substantiated and follow applicable advertising truth-in-claims standards (and platform-specific ad policies) before publishing.

Table of Contents

Client Communication & Account Management

- Prompt #1. Email: Weekly Client Status Update
- Prompt #2. Email: Explaining a Performance Dip to a Client

- Prompt #3. Email: Kicking Off a New Client Onboarding
- Prompt #4. Script: Talking Points for a Monthly Client Check-In Call
- Prompt #5. Email: Requesting Overdue Client Assets, Approvals, or Access
- Prompt #6. Response: Answering "Why Isn't This Working Yet"
- Prompt #7. Email: Recap and Next Steps After a Client Meeting
- Prompt #8. Checklist: Client Onboarding Questionnaire
- Prompt #9. Email: Re-Engaging a Client Who Has Gone Quiet

New Business & Pitching

- Prompt #10. Proposal: Scope of Work for a New Client
- Prompt #11. Email: Cold Outreach to a Potential Client
- Prompt #12. Script: Talking Points for a Discovery Call With a Prospect
- Prompt #13. Response: Answering an RFP Question About Past Results
- Prompt #14. Deck Outline: Structure for a New Business Pitch
- Prompt #15. Email: Following Up After a Pitch With No Response
- Prompt #16. Proposal: Retainer Package Tiers \(Good/Better/Best\)
- Prompt #17. Email: Declining a Bad-Fit Prospect Gracefully
- Prompt #18. Script: Handling "What Makes You Different From Other Agencies"

Ad Copy & Creative Production

- Prompt #19. Headlines: 10 Google Search Ad Headlines for a Promotion
- Prompt #20. Ad Copy: Facebook/Instagram Ad in 3 Variations
- Prompt #21. Ad Copy: LinkedIn Ad for B2B Lead Generation
- Prompt #22. Headlines: Landing Page Hero Section for a New Offer
- Prompt #23. Ad Copy: Retargeting Ad for Cart Abandoners
- Prompt #24. Script: 15-Second Video Ad Script
- Prompt #25. Ad Copy: Seasonal or Holiday Promotion Across 3 Platforms
- Prompt #26. Headlines: A/B Test Variations for an Underperforming Ad
- Prompt #27. Ad Copy: Local Service Ad for a Location-Based Business

Social Media & Content Marketing

- Prompt #28. Post: Month of Instagram Captions From One Client Brief
- Prompt #29. Post: LinkedIn Thought-Leadership Post for a Client Executive
- Prompt #30. Plan: Content Calendar Themes for a Client's Industry
- Prompt #31. Post: Turning a Client Case Study Into 5 Social Posts
- Prompt #32. Script: Short-Form Video Hook Ideas \(TikTok/Reels\)

- Prompt #33. Post: Responding to Comments on a Client's Viral Post
- Prompt #34. Email: Newsletter for a Client's Subscriber List
- Prompt #35. Post: Repurposing a Blog Post Into a Social Carousel
- Prompt #36. Plan: Community Management Response Guidelines for a Client

Strategy & Campaign Planning

- Prompt #37. Plan: 90-Day Marketing Strategy for a New Client
- Prompt #38. Plan: Media Mix Recommendation for a Given Budget
- Prompt #39. Plan: Product Launch Campaign Timeline
- Prompt #40. Analysis: Choosing Between Two Campaign Concepts
- Prompt #41. Plan: Audience Segmentation for a Client's Target Market
- Prompt #42. Plan: Budget Reallocation After Mid-Campaign Results
- Prompt #43. Plan: Seasonal Campaign Calendar for a Retail Client
- Prompt #44. Analysis: Setting Realistic KPIs for a New Campaign
- Prompt #45. Plan: Multi-Channel Campaign Brief for the Creative Team

Research & Competitive Analysis

- Prompt #46. Analysis: Competitor Ad Strategy Teardown
- Prompt #47. Research: Industry Trends Brief for a Client Kickoff
- Prompt #48. Analysis: SWOT for a Client Entering a New Market
- Prompt #49. Research: Target Audience Persona From Client Notes
- Prompt #50. Analysis: Competitor Social Media Content Comparison
- Prompt #51. Research: Keyword and Messaging Angles Competitors Are Missing
- Prompt #52. Analysis: Pricing Comparison Against Three Competitors
- Prompt #53. Research: Summarizing a Client's Customer Reviews for Insights
- Prompt #54. Analysis: Identifying a Client's Unique Selling Proposition

Reporting & Performance Analysis

- Prompt #55. Report: Monthly Performance Report Summary in Plain English
- Prompt #56. Analysis: Explaining a Drop in Ad Performance
- Prompt #57. Report: Quarterly Business Review Talking Points
- Prompt #58. Analysis: Turning Raw Campaign Data Into 3 Key Insights
- Prompt #59. Report: Comparing This Month to Last Month for a Client
- Prompt #60. Analysis: ROI Summary for a Client's Marketing Spend
- Prompt #61. Report: Year-End Recap Deck Talking Points
- Prompt #62. Analysis: Diagnosing Why Leads Aren't Converting to Sales

- Prompt #63. Report: Dashboard Walkthrough Script for a Client Call

Difficult Conversations & Objection Handling

- Prompt #64. Response: Handling a Client Who Wants to Cut the Budget
- Prompt #65. Response: Addressing Scope Creep Without Damaging the Relationship
- Prompt #66. Response: Responding to "We're Thinking of Leaving the Agency"
- Prompt #67. Response: Explaining Why Results Take Time to a New Client
- Prompt #68. Response: Handling a Client Comparing You to a Cheaper Competitor
- Prompt #69. Email: Delivering Bad News About a Missed Deadline
- Prompt #70. Response: Pushing Back on a Client's Bad Creative Idea
- Prompt #71. Response: Negotiating a Rate Increase With an Existing Client
- Prompt #72. Response: Responding to a Negative Public Review of the Agency

Operations, SOPs & Admin

- Prompt #73. SOP: Client Onboarding Process Documentation
- Prompt #74. Checklist: Pre-Launch Campaign QA Checklist
- Prompt #75. Email: Internal Handoff Notes Between Account Managers
- Prompt #76. SOP: Creative Approval Workflow for a Client
- Prompt #77. Checklist: Monthly Agency Invoicing and Billing Review
- Prompt #78. Plan: Meeting Agenda for a Weekly Team Standup
- Prompt #79. SOP: New Employee Onboarding for an Account Coordinator
- Prompt #80. Email: Vendor or Freelancer Brief for a Project
- Prompt #81. Checklist: Client Offboarding Process

Agency-Specific & Specialized Tasks

- Prompt #82. Brief: Creative Brief for the Design Team
- Prompt #83. Brief: Media Buy Brief for Paid Media Team
- Prompt #84. Plan: Influencer Outreach List Criteria for a Campaign
- Prompt #85. Analysis: Choosing the Right Platform Mix for a New Client's Budget
- Prompt #86. Plan: Crisis Communication Response for a Client PR Issue
- Prompt #87. Brief: SEO Content Brief for a Freelance Writer
- Prompt #88. Plan: Email Automation Flow Outline for a Client
- Prompt #89. Analysis: Attribution Model Explanation for a Client
- Prompt #90. Plan: Agency Rebrand Messaging Workshop Outline

Bonus: Power Prompts

- Prompt #91. Power Prompt: Generate a Month of Content From One Service Description
- Prompt #92. Power Prompt: Build a Full 90-Day Campaign From a One-Paragraph Brief
- Prompt #93. Power Prompt: Turn One Case Study Into a Full Cross-Channel Promotion Kit
- Prompt #94. Power Prompt: Diagnose and Fix an Underperforming Campaign End-to-End
- Prompt #95. Power Prompt: Build a Complete New Business Pitch From a Prospect's Website
- Prompt #96. Power Prompt: Create a Full Client Onboarding Package From a Signed Contract
- Prompt #97. Power Prompt: Turn a Client Complaint Into a Recovery Plan and Follow-Up Sequence
- Prompt #98. Power Prompt: Build a Quarterly Business Review Deck From Raw Metrics
- Prompt #99. Power Prompt: Create a Full Social Media Content System for a New Client
- Prompt #100. Power Prompt: Run a Competitive Repositioning Exercise for a Client Losing Market Share

Category Index

Category	Prompt Range	Look here when...
Client Communication & Account Management	#1–#9	You need to write to a client: updates, recaps, onboarding, or re-engagement
New Business & Pitching	#10–#18	You're closing a deal: proposals, cold outreach, discovery calls, pitch decks
Ad Copy & Creative Production	#19–#27	You need ad copy or headlines for a specific platform or offer
Social Media & Content Marketing	#28–#36	You're filling a content calendar: captions, posts, newsletters, carousels
Strategy & Campaign Planning	#37–#45	You're mapping out a campaign, budget split, or timeline before execution
Research & Competitive Analysis	#46–#54	You need to understand a client's market, competitors, or audience
Reporting & Performance Analysis	#55–#63	You're turning numbers into a client-ready update or explanation

Category	Prompt Range	Look here when...
Difficult Conversations & Objection Handling	#64–#72	You're facing a tense client moment: budget cuts, complaints, pushback
Operations, SOPs & Admin	#73–#81	You're documenting an internal process, checklist, or handoff
Agency-Specific & Specialized Tasks	#82–#90	You need a specialized brief or plan unique to agency work
Bonus: Power Prompts	#91–#100	You want one prompt to handle a multi-step task end to end

Client Communication & Account Management

Prompt #1. Email: Weekly Client Status Update

- Use this when: You need to send a quick client update or weekly recap and don't want to start from a blank page.
- The prompt:

You are an account manager at a marketing agency writing a weekly status email to a client. Write a short, upbeat but honest update covering: what got done this week, what's in progress, what's blocked (if anything), and what's coming next week. Keep it to 150-200 words, use plain language a busy business owner can skim in 30 seconds, and end with one clear question or ask if you need something from them.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

This week's completed items: [LIST OF TASKS]

In progress: [LIST OF TASKS]

Blockers or open items: [BLOCKERS, IF ANY]

Next week's plan: [UPCOMING TASKS]

- Pro tip: Paste last week's email in as a second message and ask the AI to match the tone so every update sounds consistent over time.

Prompt #2. Email: Explaining a Performance Dip to a Client

- Use this when: Numbers went down this month and you need to explain the drop or downturn before the client notices and panics.
- The prompt:

You are a marketing account manager explaining a performance dip to a client in a calm, confident, non-defensive way. Write an email that: names the metric that dropped, gives the likely reason in plain English (no jargon), states what you're already doing about it, and gives a realistic timeline for improvement. Do not over-apologize or make promises you can't back up. Keep it under 175 words.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Metric that dropped: [METRIC, e.g., click-through rate]

Percent change: [PERCENT CHANGE]

Likely cause: [CAUSE, e.g., seasonality, platform change, budget cut]

Action already taken or planned: [ACTION STEPS]

- Pro tip: Ask the AI for a second, shorter version you can use as a Slack or text message if the client prefers quick updates over email.

Prompt #3. Email: Kicking Off a New Client Onboarding

- Use this when: You just signed a new client or closed a new account and need to send the welcome and kickoff email.
- The prompt:

Write a warm, professional welcome email to a new marketing client kicking off a project. Introduce the agency's process in 3-4 simple steps, list what you need from them to get started (assets, access, brand guidelines, etc.), set expectations for the first two weeks, and introduce their main point of contact on your team. Keep the tone friendly and confident, not overly formal. 200 words max.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Service or project starting: [SERVICE, e.g., paid social management]

Items needed from client: [LIST OF ITEMS]

Primary point of contact: [TEAM MEMBER NAME AND ROLE]

- Pro tip: Attach your actual onboarding checklist as context so the AI references real deliverables instead of generic ones.

Prompt #4. Script: Talking Points for a Monthly Client Check-In Call

- Use this when: You have a recurring client call or account review coming up and want a simple agenda instead of winging it.
- The prompt:

Create a talking-points script for a 30-minute monthly client check-in call. Structure it as: opening small talk transition (1 line), quick wins to highlight (bullet list), one challenge or open item to discuss, a question to ask the client about their business priorities, and a clear close with next steps. Write it in a conversational tone, like notes a person would actually glance at during a call, not a formal script.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

This month's wins: [WINS]

Open item or challenge to raise: [CHALLENGE]

Business priority to ask about: [TOPIC]

- Pro tip: Keep this prompt saved and just swap the bracketed details each month so your calls follow a consistent, professional structure.

Prompt #5. Email: Requesting Overdue Client Assets, Approvals, or Access

- Use this when: A client is holding up work by not sending logos, copy sign-off, login access, or approvals, and you need a polite but firm nudge.
- The prompt:

Write a friendly but firm follow-up email asking a client for overdue items that are blocking their project. Reference that this was requested before, state clearly what's needed and why it matters (tie it to their timeline or deadline), and make it easy for them to act by listing exactly what to send and by when. Avoid sounding passive-aggressive. Under 130 words.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Items needed: [LIST OF ITEMS, e.g., logo files, ad account access, copy approval]

Deadline this is blocking: [DEADLINE OR MILESTONE]

Date originally requested: [DATE]

- Pro tip: Ask for a follow-up version that's 20% firmer in case this is the second or third reminder.

Prompt #6. Response: Answering "Why Isn't This Working Yet"

- Use this when: A client asks why they haven't seen results yet, whether by email, on a call, or in a message you need to reply to in writing.

- The prompt:

A client is asking why their marketing campaign isn't producing results yet. Write a response that validates their concern without being defensive, explains realistic timelines for this type of campaign in plain terms, shares one specific data point that shows progress (even if small), and reassures them with a concrete next step or checkpoint date. Keep it honest, not falsely optimistic. 150 words max.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign type: [CAMPAIGN TYPE, e.g., SEO, paid ads, email]

Time campaign has been live: [TIMEFRAME]

Positive data point to share: [METRIC OR SIGNAL]

Next checkpoint: [DATE OR MILESTONE]

- Pro tip: If the concern is really about budget, use Prompt #64 instead, it's built specifically for that conversation.

Prompt #7. Email: Recap and Next Steps After a Client Meeting

- Use this when: You just got off a client call and need to send a recap email before you forget what was decided.

- The prompt:

Turn these rough meeting notes into a clean recap email for a marketing client. Organize it into three sections: Decisions Made, Action Items (with who owns each one and a due date), and Open Questions. Keep the tone professional and organized. Do not add anything that wasn't in the notes.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Meeting notes: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES OR BULLET POINTS]

Action item owners: [NAMES]

- Pro tip: Paste in messy, unstructured notes exactly as you typed them during the call. The AI is better at organizing than you'd expect.

Prompt #8. Checklist: Client Onboarding Questionnaire

- Use this when: You need a discovery questionnaire to send a new client so you're not missing key info before starting work.

- The prompt:

Create a client onboarding questionnaire for a marketing agency starting a new [SERVICE TYPE] engagement. Include 12-15 questions covering: business background, target audience, past marketing efforts and results, brand voice and guidelines, competitors, goals for this engagement, and internal approval process. Format as a numbered list a client can fill out directly, with a short one-line explanation under any question that might be unclear.

Service type: [SERVICE TYPE, e.g., social media management, PPC, SEO]

Client industry: [INDUSTRY]

- Pro tip: Turn this into a reusable Google Form or Notion template once, and you'll never have to write a discovery questionnaire from scratch again.

Prompt #9. Email: Re-Engaging a Client Who Has Gone Quiet

- Use this when: A client has stopped responding to emails or Slack messages and you need to reopen the conversation without sounding annoyed.
- The prompt:

Write a friendly check-in email to a client who has gone quiet or unresponsive for a couple of weeks. Keep it light, not guilt-tripping. Reference the last thing you were working on together, offer one small piece of value or update, and ask a low-pressure question that's easy to answer in one line. End with an easy out in case they're just swamped.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Last topic discussed: [TOPIC OR PROJECT]

Small update or value-add to include: [UPDATE, e.g., a quick win or resource]

Number of weeks since last response: [TIMEFRAME]

- Pro tip: Ask for two versions: one casual and one more formal, then pick based on how that client normally communicates.

New Business & Pitching

Prompt #10. Proposal: Scope of Work for a New Client

- Use this when: You're closing a deal or writing a contract and need a clear scope of work document, sometimes called a statement of work.
- The prompt:

Write a scope of work section for a marketing services proposal. Include: a one-paragraph project summary, a bulleted list of specific deliverables with frequency (e.g., "4 static ads per month"), what is explicitly NOT included to prevent scope creep later, the timeline for the first phase, and payment terms. Use clear, plain-English business language, no fluff or filler phrases.

Client/prospect name: [CLIENT NAME]

Service being sold: [SERVICE, e.g., paid social, SEO, full-funnel marketing]

Monthly deliverables: [LIST DELIVERABLES]

Monthly retainer or project price: [PRICE]

Contract length: [LENGTH, e.g., 3-month minimum]

- Pro tip: The "not included" section is the most important part for preventing scope creep later. Never skip it, even for small projects.

Prompt #11. Email: Cold Outreach to a Potential Client

- Use this when: You're prospecting for new business and need a cold email that doesn't sound like every other agency pitch in their inbox.
- The prompt:

Write a cold outreach email to a potential client from a marketing agency. Open with a specific, researched observation about their business (not a generic compliment), state one concrete way you could help tied to a result, not a service name, ask a low-commitment question instead of pushing for a call right away, and keep the whole email under 100 words. No buzzwords like "synergy" or "game-changing."

Prospect business name: [PROSPECT NAME]

Specific observation about their business: [OBSERVATION, e.g., recent launch, ad they're running, review pattern]

Result you could help with: [RESULT, e.g., more booked calls, lower cost per lead]

Your agency's relevant proof point: [PROOF POINT, e.g., client result, years in business]

- Pro tip: Generate 3 different opening lines and test which gets more replies before locking in one template.

Prompt #12. Script: Talking Points for a Discovery Call With a Prospect

- Use this when: You have a first call booked with a potential client and want a simple guide so you ask the right questions instead of just pitching.
- The prompt:

Create a discovery call script for a marketing agency's first call with a new prospect. Include: a 2-sentence opener to build rapport, 6-8 open-ended questions covering their goals, budget range, past marketing experience, and decision timeline, and 2 questions to uncover their real pain point versus their stated one. End with a suggested transition line into next steps. Format as a scannable outline, not a paragraph.

Prospect business type: [INDUSTRY/BUSINESS TYPE]

Service they inquired about: [SERVICE]

- Pro tip: Ask a follow-up question after the call: paste your notes back in and have the AI draft the recap email using Prompt #7's structure.

Prompt #13. Response: Answering an RFP Question About Past Results

- Use this when: You're filling out a request for proposal (RFP) and need to answer a question about case studies or past performance persuasively but honestly.
- The prompt:

Help me write a response to an RFP question asking about our agency's past results and relevant case studies. Use the details below to write a confident, specific, results-first answer in 100-150 words. Lead with the number or outcome, then briefly explain how we achieved it, then tie it back to what this prospect is trying to achieve. Avoid vague claims like "we drive great results."

RFP question: [PASTE EXACT QUESTION]

Relevant past client result: [RESULT, e.g., "40% increase in qualified leads in 90 days"]

How you achieved it: [BRIEF METHOD]

What this prospect cares about most: [PROSPECT'S STATED GOAL]

- Pro tip: Never let the AI invent a statistic. Always feed it your real numbers, even rounded or approximate ones.

Prompt #14. Deck Outline: Structure for a New Business Pitch

- Use this when: You need to build a pitch deck for a prospective client and want a solid slide-by-slide outline before you start designing.
- The prompt:

Create a slide-by-slide outline for a new business pitch deck for a marketing agency. Give me 10-12 slides with a title and 2-3 bullet points of suggested content for each, covering: the prospect's challenge, our understanding of their business, our proposed approach, relevant case studies, team, pricing, and next steps. Keep the flow persuasive and logical, building toward a clear call to action on the last slide.

Prospect name: [PROSPECT NAME]

Prospect's main challenge: [CHALLENGE]

Proposed approach or service: [SERVICE/APPROACH]

Relevant case study to feature: [CASE STUDY SUMMARY]

- Pro tip: Ask the AI to also write speaker notes for each slide so whoever presents doesn't have to improvise.

Prompt #15. Email: Following Up After a Pitch With No Response

- Use this when: You sent a proposal or pitched a prospect and haven't heard back, and need a follow-up that doesn't sound needy.
- The prompt:

Write a follow-up email to a prospect after a pitch or proposal with no response in [NUMBER] days. Keep it short and low-pressure, assume they're just busy rather than uninterested, add one small new piece of value (an insight, a relevant article, or a quick idea specific to their business), and end with an easy yes-or-no question rather than "just checking in."

Prospect name: [PROSPECT NAME]

Days since proposal sent: [NUMBER]

New value-add to include: [INSIGHT OR IDEA]

- Pro tip: Ask for a 3-email follow-up sequence at once (day 3, day 10, day 21) so you're not writing these one at a time.

Prompt #16. Proposal: Retainer Package Tiers (Good/Better/Best)

- Use this when: You're presenting pricing options and want to structure them as tiered packages instead of one take-it-or-leave-it price.
- The prompt:

Write three tiered retainer package descriptions (Good, Better, Best) for a marketing agency's proposal. For each tier, list the name, monthly price, included deliverables, and one sentence on who it's best for. Make the middle tier the clear best value option through what's included, not through pushy sales language. Format as a comparison a client could scan in under a minute.

Service category: [SERVICE, e.g., paid media management]

Entry-level price point: [PRICE]

Deliverables available across tiers: [LIST OF POSSIBLE DELIVERABLES]

- Pro tip: Ask the AI to reformat the output as a markdown table so it's easy to paste directly into a proposal document or slide.

Prompt #17. Email: Declining a Bad-Fit Prospect Gracefully

- Use this when: A prospect isn't a good fit for your agency, whether on budget, industry, or expectations, and you need to say no without burning the bridge.
- The prompt:

Write an email declining a prospective client because they're not the right fit for our agency right now. Be honest but tactful about the reason without being harsh, thank them for their time, and if appropriate, refer them to a different type of resource or suggest they reach back out in the future. Keep it warm and under 100 words.

Prospect name: [PROSPECT NAME]

Reason it's not a fit: [REASON, e.g., budget too low, outside our specialty]

Alternative to suggest, if any: [ALTERNATIVE OR NONE]

- Pro tip: A gracious no often turns into a referral later. Always leave the door open unless there's a real reason not to.

Prompt #18. Script: Handling "What Makes You Different From Other Agencies"

- Use this when: A prospect asks how you compare to other agencies or freelancers they're considering, on a call or in writing.
- The prompt:

Help me answer the question "what makes your agency different from others we're considering" in a confident, specific way that avoids generic claims like "we really care" or "we're more strategic." Use the real differentiators below to build a 3-part answer: our approach, our results, and our client experience. Keep it conversational, like something I'd actually say out loud, 100 words max.

Real differentiator #1: [E.g., specialize in one industry]

Real differentiator #2: [E.g., in-house creative team, no freelancers]

Real differentiator #3: [E.g., weekly reporting, no black box]

- Pro tip: Practice saying the answer out loud, not just reading it. Scripts that sound natural spoken often need shorter sentences than what reads well on a page.

Ad Copy & Creative Production

Prompt #19. Headlines: 10 Google Search Ad Headlines for a Promotion

- Use this when: You need a batch of Google Search ad headlines fast and don't want to write them one at a time.
- The prompt:

Write 10 Google Search ad headlines (30 characters max each) for the offer below. Vary the angle across the set: some benefit-led, some urgency-led, some price-led, and at least one question-based. Label each headline with its character count so I know it fits. Avoid exclamation points on more than 2 of them.

Business/client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Offer or promotion: [OFFER, e.g., "20% off first order"]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Deadline or urgency element, if any: [DEADLINE]

- Pro tip: Ask for the character count on every headline. AI tools frequently miscount and go over the platform limit.

Prompt #20. Ad Copy: Facebook/Instagram Ad in 3 Variations

- Use this when: You're launching or testing a Meta ad and want a few different angles to A/B test instead of guessing which one will work.
- The prompt:

Write 3 versions of a Facebook/Instagram ad for the offer below. Each version should have a hook line, 2-3 sentences of body copy, and a call to action. Make each version a genuinely different angle (for example: one pain-point led, one social-proof led, one curiosity led), not just reworded versions of the same idea. Keep each version under 125 words and write in a [TONE] voice.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Product or offer: [OFFER]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Tone: [TONE, e.g., friendly and casual, bold and direct]

Call to action: [CTA, e.g., "Shop Now", "Book a Call"]

- Pro tip: Run all 3 as a real split test before declaring a winner. The version that reads best to you is often not the one that performs best.

Prompt #21. Ad Copy: LinkedIn Ad for B2B Lead Generation

- Use this when: You're writing a LinkedIn ad for a B2B client and need copy that sounds credible to a professional audience, not consumer-facing.
- The prompt:

Write a LinkedIn ad for a B2B lead generation campaign. Include a headline (under 70 characters), body copy (under 150 words) that leads with a specific business problem before the solution, and a call to action suited to a professional buyer (like "Download the Guide" or "Book a Demo," not "Shop Now"). Avoid consumer-style hype language; keep the tone credible and specific.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Target job titles or roles: [JOB TITLES]

Business problem being solved: [PROBLEM]

Lead magnet or offer: [OFFER, e.g., free audit, whitepaper, demo]

- Pro tip: Ask for a version that opens with a statistic and a version that opens with a question, then see which one your audience responds to.

Prompt #22. Headlines: Landing Page Hero Section for a New Offer

- Use this when: You need the top-of-page headline and subheadline for a client's landing page and the blank page is winning.
- The prompt:

Write 5 options for a landing page hero section for the offer below. Each option should include a headline (under 10 words) and a one-sentence subheadline that clarifies the offer. Focus on the specific outcome the visitor gets, not generic phrases like "best solution" or "take your business to the next level."

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Offer or product: [OFFER]

Specific outcome for the customer: [OUTCOME]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

- Pro tip: Read each headline out loud. If it could apply to any business in any industry, it's too generic, ask for a more specific rewrite.

Prompt #23. Ad Copy: Retargeting Ad for Cart Abandoners

- Use this when: You need a retargeting or remarketing ad aimed at people who visited a site or added to cart but didn't buy.

- The prompt:

Write a retargeting ad aimed at people who viewed a product or added it to cart but didn't purchase. Address the likely hesitation directly (price, trust, or indecision), include a nudge like a limited-time incentive if one exists, and keep the tone helpful rather than pushy. Provide a headline, one line of body copy, and a call to action.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Product: [PRODUCT]

Likely reason for hesitation: [REASON, e.g., price, shipping cost, comparing options]

Incentive available, if any: [INCENTIVE, e.g., free shipping, 10% off, or none]

- Pro tip: If there's no discount to offer, ask the AI to lean on trust signals (reviews, guarantees) instead of manufacturing fake urgency.

Prompt #24. Script: 15-Second Video Ad Script

- Use this when: You need a short-form video ad script for TikTok, Reels, or YouTube Shorts and want a tight, scroll-stopping structure.

- The prompt:

Write a 15-second video ad script for the product below. Structure it as: a hook in the first 3 seconds that stops the scroll, a quick problem/solution beat, and a clear call to action at the end. Write it as a simple two-column script with "VISUAL" and "VOICEOVER/TEXT" side by side so it's easy to hand to whoever is filming or editing.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Product or service: [PRODUCT]

Hook angle to use: [ANGLE, e.g., relatable problem, bold claim, surprising stat]

Platform: [PLATFORM, e.g., TikTok, Instagram Reels]

- Pro tip: Ask for 3 different hook lines for the same script so you can film one version and swap just the opening for quick A/B testing.

Prompt #25. Ad Copy: Seasonal or Holiday Promotion Across 3 Platforms

- Use this when: You need to adapt one seasonal promotion into ad copy for multiple platforms at once instead of writing each one separately.

- The prompt:

Take this seasonal promotion and write platform-specific ad copy for Google Search, Facebook/Instagram, and email subject lines. Keep the core offer identical across all three, but adjust the tone, length, and format to fit each platform's norms (short and direct for Google, more visual/emotional for Meta, curiosity-driven for the email subject line). Output as three clearly labeled sections.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Holiday or season: [HOLIDAY/SEASON]

Offer: [OFFER]

End date of promotion: [DATE]

- Pro tip: Batch this at the start of the season for every major holiday your client runs promotions for, so you're never scrambling the week before.

Prompt #26. Headlines: A/B Test Variations for an Underperforming Ad

- Use this when: An existing ad's click-through rate has dropped or stalled and you need fresh headline variations to test against it.
- The prompt:

Here is an ad that's underperforming. Write 5 new headline variations that keep the same core offer but change the angle: try one that leads with a number or stat, one that asks a question, one that names the specific audience, one that creates urgency, and one that leads with a customer outcome. Flag which existing element (if any) might be causing fatigue.

Current headline: [PASTE CURRENT HEADLINE]

Current performance note: [E.g., "CTR dropped 30% over 2 weeks"]

Offer: [OFFER]

Audience: [AUDIENCE]

- Pro tip: Ad fatigue is often the real problem, not the copy. If a new angle doesn't help within a week, consider that the audience needs to grow, not the headline to change again.

Prompt #27. Ad Copy: Local Service Ad for a Location-Based Business

- Use this when: You're writing ad copy for a local business (a dentist, contractor, gym, restaurant) where location and trust matter more than a broad national pitch.
- The prompt:

Write a local service ad for the business below. Lead with the neighborhood or city name to signal relevance, include a trust element (years in business, review count, or licensing/certification), and end with a low-friction call to action suited to local intent, like "Call Now" or "Get Directions." Keep it under 100 words and avoid sounding like a national chain ad.

Business name: [BUSINESS NAME]

City or neighborhood: [LOCATION]

Service: [SERVICE]

Trust element: [TRUST ELEMENT, e.g., "15 years in business," "500+ 5-star reviews"]

- Pro tip: Always double-check that any claim about reviews, licensing, or awards is current and accurate before it goes live. Local ads get reported for false claims more than people expect.

Social Media & Content Marketing

Prompt #28. Post: Month of Instagram Captions From One Client Brief

- Use this when: You need to fill out a content calendar fast and want a batch of captions instead of writing them one post at a time.
- The prompt:

Using the client info below, write 12 Instagram captions for one month of posts (about 3 per week). Vary the post type across the set: include a mix of educational tips, behind-the-scenes, customer proof, and promotional posts. Each caption should be 2-4 sentences, end with a call to action or question to drive comments, and include 3-5 relevant hashtag suggestions.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Brand voice: [VOICE, e.g., playful, professional, warm]

Current promotion or focus, if any: [PROMOTION OR TOPIC]

- Pro tip: Ask the AI to label each caption by post type (educational, BTS, proof, promo) so you can quickly check the mix isn't too promotional.

Prompt #29. Post: LinkedIn Thought-Leadership Post for a Client Executive

- Use this when: A client's founder or executive wants to post on LinkedIn to build their personal brand but doesn't have time to write it themselves.
- The prompt:

Write a LinkedIn post in the voice of a company executive sharing a professional opinion or lesson learned. Open with a strong first line that works even if the post gets cut off ("see more"), tell a brief, specific story or observation rather than generic advice, and end with a question that invites comments. Write in first person, 150-200 words, no corporate jargon.

Executive name and title: [NAME, TITLE]

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Topic or lesson to share: [TOPIC]

Specific example or story detail to include: [DETAIL]

- Pro tip: Feed the AI a few of the executive's past posts or even a voice memo transcript so the writing sounds like them, not like a generic LinkedIn influencer.

Prompt #30. Plan: Content Calendar Themes for a Client's Industry

- Use this when: You're planning next month's content and need theme ideas before you can fill in specific posts.
- The prompt:

Create a monthly content theme plan for a client in the [INDUSTRY] industry. Give me 4 weekly themes that connect to their business goals, and under each theme, list 3 content angle ideas (not full posts, just ideas) that could work across social media, email, or blog. Include any relevant awareness days or seasonal moments that month worth tying content to.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Month: [MONTH]

Business goal this content should support: [GOAL, e.g., drive bookings, build trust, launch a product]

- Pro tip: Once themes are approved, feed them back into Prompt #28 to generate the actual captions for each theme.

Prompt #31. Post: Turning a Client Case Study Into 5 Social Posts

- Use this when: You have a great client result or testimonial and want to squeeze more content out of it instead of posting it once and moving on.
- The prompt:

Turn this case study or client result into 5 different social media posts, each highlighting a different angle: the specific number/result, the emotional before-and-after, the process behind the result, a direct quote treatment, and a "lesson other customers can apply" angle. Keep each post platform-neutral in length (under 100 words) so it can be adapted to Instagram, LinkedIn, or Facebook.

Case study or result summary: [PASTE SUMMARY OR KEY DETAILS]

Client/customer name (or "a client" if anonymous): [NAME OR "a client"]

Specific metric or result: [METRIC]

- Pro tip: One good case study can realistically fuel content for 2-3 weeks. Don't post it once and let it die, run this prompt every time you land a strong result.

Prompt #32. Script: Short-Form Video Hook Ideas (TikTok/Reels)

- Use this when: You're planning short-form video content and the hardest part is always the first line, so you need hook options before scripting the rest.
- The prompt:

Write 10 hook lines (the first 1-2 spoken seconds) for a short-form video about the topic below. Vary the style: include a few "wait, what" curiosity hooks, a few direct-benefit hooks, a few relatable-problem hooks, and at least one that's a bold or contrarian statement. Keep each hook under 12 words so it works as on-screen text too.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Video topic: [TOPIC]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

- Pro tip: Test hooks by watching the first 2 seconds with the sound off. If it doesn't make sense as on-screen text alone, it's not a strong enough hook yet.

Prompt #33. Post: Responding to Comments on a Client's Viral Post

- Use this when: A client's post unexpectedly took off and now there are dozens of comments (good and bad) that need responses fast.
- The prompt:

Here are comments on a client's social post that's getting more engagement than usual. Group them into categories (questions, compliments, complaints, spam/trolls) and write a suggested reply for each category that matches the brand's voice. Keep replies short, human, and specific enough that they don't look copy-pasted, even though they're templated by category.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Brand voice: [VOICE]

Comments to respond to: [PASTE A SAMPLE OF COMMENTS]

- Pro tip: Never post AI-drafted replies to sensitive complaints without reading them fully first. Use Prompt #72 instead if a comment is really a public complaint that needs careful handling.

Prompt #34. Email: Newsletter for a Client's Subscriber List

- Use this when: A client has a monthly or weekly email newsletter that needs writing and you're staring at last month's blank template.
- The prompt:

Write an email newsletter for the client below. Structure it as: a short personal-feeling opener (2-3 sentences), a main content section (a tip, update, or story related to their business), a secondary section (a product highlight, promotion, or upcoming event), and a clear call to action. Write a subject line and preview text too. Keep the tone conversational, like a note from a real person, not a corporate blast.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Main topic or update this month: [TOPIC]

Secondary item to include: [PROMOTION/EVENT/PRODUCT]

Brand voice: [VOICE]

- Pro tip: Ask for 3 subject line options and note which type each one is (curiosity, benefit, or personal) so you can track which style gets better open rates over time.

Prompt #35. Post: Repurposing a Blog Post Into a Social Carousel

- Use this when: A client has a blog post or long article and you want to turn it into a multi-slide social carousel without starting from scratch.
- The prompt:

Turn this blog post into a 6-8 slide social media carousel. Slide 1 should be a scroll-stopping title slide, the middle slides should each cover one key point in a short, punchy sentence or two (not full paragraphs), and the final slide should have a call to action. Write the text for each slide clearly labeled "Slide 1," "Slide 2," and so on.

Blog post content or summary: [PASTE CONTENT OR SUMMARY]

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Call to action for final slide: [CTA]

- Pro tip: Keep each slide's text under 20 words. If a slide feels like a paragraph, ask the AI to split it into two slides instead.

Prompt #36. Plan: Community Management Response Guidelines for a Client

- Use this when: You're managing a client's social accounts and want a reference guide so anyone on the team can respond to comments and DMs consistently.

- The prompt:

Create a community management response guide for a client's social media accounts. Include: 3-4 example responses to common positive comments, 3-4 example responses to common questions (pricing, hours, availability), guidance on tone (what to do and avoid), and a clear rule for when a comment or DM should be escalated to a human on the account team instead of answered directly.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Brand voice: [VOICE]

Common questions this business gets: [LIST COMMON QUESTIONS]

Escalation trigger (e.g., complaints, legal, pricing disputes): [TRIGGER TYPES]

- Pro tip: Revisit this guide every quarter. New products, promotions, and recurring complaints all change what "common" comments look like.

Strategy & Campaign Planning

Prompt #37. Plan: 90-Day Marketing Strategy for a New Client

- Use this when: You just signed a new client and need a strategic roadmap for their first quarter, not just a task list.
- The prompt:

Build a 90-day marketing strategy outline for a new client. Break it into three 30-day phases (Foundation, Momentum, Optimization), and under each phase list 3-4 key priorities and what success looks like at the end of that phase. Tie every priority back to the client's stated goal. Keep it strategic and high-level, this is a roadmap, not a detailed task list.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Primary goal: [GOAL, e.g., increase leads, grow online sales, build brand awareness]

Current marketing state: [CURRENT STATE, e.g., "no paid ads running, weak social presence"]

- Pro tip: Once this is approved, feed each phase back in separately and ask for a detailed task breakdown with owners and dates.

Prompt #38. Plan: Media Mix Recommendation for a Given Budget

- Use this when: A client gives you a budget number and you need to recommend how to split it across channels with reasoning they'll understand.

- The prompt:

Recommend a media mix for the monthly budget below. Suggest a percentage split across relevant channels (for example: paid search, paid social, email, content/SEO), explain in one sentence why each channel gets that allocation given the client's goal and audience, and flag any channel you'd recommend skipping entirely for now and why. Present as a simple table: Channel, % of Budget, Reason.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Monthly budget: [BUDGET]

Primary goal: [GOAL]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Channels already in use, if any: [CURRENT CHANNELS]

- Pro tip: Always sanity-check the AI's split against real benchmarks for the client's industry before presenting it, budget splits should reflect what's actually worked for similar businesses.

Prompt #39. Plan: Product Launch Campaign Timeline

- Use this when: A client is launching a new product or service and needs a marketing timeline built out from announcement to post-launch.
- The prompt:

Build a marketing campaign timeline for a product launch. Break it into three phases: Pre-Launch (teaser/anticipation building), Launch Day, and Post-Launch (momentum and retargeting). For each phase, list the key activities, which channels they run on, and roughly how many days before or after launch they should happen. Format as a simple timeline table.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Product/service launching: [PRODUCT]

Launch date: [DATE]

Channels available: [CHANNELS, e.g., email, social, paid ads, PR]

- Pro tip: Ask for a second version that assumes half the budget, in case the client's launch budget ends up smaller than planned.

Prompt #40. Analysis: Choosing Between Two Campaign Concepts

- Use this when: Your team has two creative or strategic directions for a campaign and needs a clear-eyed comparison before presenting to the client.
- The prompt:

Compare these two campaign concepts and help me think through which one better serves the client's goal. For each concept, list the strengths, the risks, and what type of audience or moment it would work best for. Then give a recommendation with reasoning, but note that the final call depends on factors only the team knows, like client risk tolerance or brand history.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Goal this campaign should achieve: [GOAL]

Concept A: [DESCRIBE CONCEPT A]

Concept B: [DESCRIBE CONCEPT B]

- Pro tip: Use this as a thinking tool before the client meeting, not as the final answer. It's meant to sharpen your own reasoning, not replace it.

Prompt #41. Plan: Audience Segmentation for a Client's Target Market

- Use this when: A client says "everyone is my customer" and you need to help them (and your campaign) get more specific.
- The prompt:

Based on the information below, break this client's broad target market into 3 distinct audience segments. For each segment, describe their key characteristics, their main motivation for buying, and one messaging angle that would resonate specifically with them. Keep descriptions grounded in the info given, don't invent demographic details that weren't provided.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Product/service: [PRODUCT]

What the client currently says about their audience: [CURRENT AUDIENCE DESCRIPTION]

Any customer data or notes available: [DATA OR NOTES, IF ANY]

- Pro tip: If the client has real customer data (surveys, purchase history, reviews), always feed that in. Segments built on real signals beat segments built on assumptions every time.

Prompt #42. Plan: Budget Reallocation After Mid-Campaign Results

- Use this when: A campaign is halfway through and some channels or ads are clearly outperforming others, and you need to recommend shifting spend.
- The prompt:

Based on the mid-campaign performance below, recommend how to reallocate the remaining budget. Identify which channels or ads are outperforming and underperforming, suggest a specific new percentage split for the rest of the campaign, and explain the reasoning in language a non-technical client would understand. Flag anything you'd want more data on before making a bigger shift.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Original budget split: [ORIGINAL SPLIT]

Remaining budget: [AMOUNT]

Performance so far by channel: [PASTE PERFORMANCE DATA]

- Pro tip: Wait for statistically meaningful data before reallocating. A channel that's "underperforming" after 3 days of spend might just need more time.

Prompt #43. Plan: Seasonal Campaign Calendar for a Retail Client

- Use this when: A retail or seasonal-business client needs a full year (or quarter) of campaign moments planned out at once.
- The prompt:

Build a seasonal campaign calendar for a retail client covering [TIMEFRAME]. List the key sales moments and seasonal opportunities relevant to their business, and for each one note: the approximate date range, a suggested campaign theme, and which channels it should run on. Prioritize moments that actually fit this specific business, not every generic retail holiday.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Industry/product category: [INDUSTRY]

Timeframe: [TIMEFRAME, e.g., Q4, full year]

Channels available: [CHANNELS]

- Pro tip: Cross-check any dates the AI suggests (holidays, awareness days) against a real calendar. Date accuracy is one thing worth verifying yourself every time.

Prompt #44. Analysis: Setting Realistic KPIs for a New Campaign

- Use this when: A client wants specific performance targets before a campaign launches and you need numbers grounded in reality, not guesses.
- The prompt:

Help me set realistic KPI targets for a new campaign. Based on the details below, suggest a reasonable target range (not a single exact number) for the primary metric, explain what factors could push results toward the high or low end of that range, and suggest one leading indicator we can check early to see if we're on track before the final result is in.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign type: [CAMPAIGN TYPE]

Budget: [BUDGET]

Primary metric to set a target for: [METRIC, e.g., cost per lead, ROAS]

Any past performance data available: [PAST DATA, IF ANY]

- Pro tip: Present KPI targets as a range, not a single number, to the client. It sets more honest expectations and protects you if results land on the lower end.

Prompt #45. Plan: Multi-Channel Campaign Brief for the Creative Team

- Use this when: Strategy is locked and now you need to brief your internal creative or design team so they can start building assets.
- The prompt:

Turn this campaign strategy into a creative brief for our internal design and content team. Include: campaign objective, target audience in one sentence, key message, tone/mood direction, list of deliverables needed by channel, and any mandatory elements (logo usage, legal disclaimers, brand colors). Keep it tight and actionable, this should save the creative team from having to ask clarifying questions.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign objective: [OBJECTIVE]

Key message: [MESSAGE]

Deliverables needed: [LIST, e.g., 3 static ads, 1 video, 2 email banners]

Mandatory brand elements: [ELEMENTS]

- Pro tip: A good brief prevents most revision rounds. Spend the extra 5 minutes filling in every field rather than leaving "TBD" for the creative team to guess at.

Research & Competitive Analysis

Prompt #46. Analysis: Competitor Ad Strategy Teardown

- Use this when: You want to break down what a competitor is doing in their ads before building a client's own campaign strategy.
- The prompt:

Analyze the competitor ads described below and give me a teardown. Identify the likely target audience for each ad, the core message or hook being used, the offer or call to action, and one thing our client's ads could do differently to stand out. Organize the output by ad, then end with a short summary of the overall pattern across all of them.

Competitor name: [COMPETITOR NAME]

Ads to analyze (paste copy, describe visuals, or summarize): [PASTE OR DESCRIBE ADS]

Our client's business: [CLIENT NAME/BUSINESS]

- Pro tip: Screenshot competitor ads from the Meta Ad Library or Google Ads Transparency Center and describe what you see in detail, the more specific your input, the sharper the teardown.

Prompt #47. Research: Industry Trends Brief for a Client Kickoff

- Use this when: You're onboarding a new client and want to show up to the first strategy meeting with a sharp view of their industry.
- The prompt:

Based on what's publicly known and commonly discussed about the [INDUSTRY] industry, put together a brief covering: 3 current trends affecting businesses like this one, 2 common challenges businesses in this space are facing, and 2 opportunities a business could capitalize on right now. Keep it practical and specific to this business size and type, not a generic industry overview.

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Business size or context: [SIZE/CONTEXT, e.g., "local, 2 locations, 10 employees"]

- Pro tip: Treat this as a starting hypothesis to validate, not a finished fact sheet. Confirm anything specific with a quick web search before presenting it as current.

Prompt #48. Analysis: SWOT for a Client Entering a New Market

- Use this when: A client is expanding into a new market, product line, or geography and wants a strategic gut-check before committing budget.
- The prompt:

Create a SWOT analysis (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats) for this client entering a new market. Base the strengths and weaknesses on their existing business, and base the opportunities and threats on the new market itself. Keep each section to 3-4 specific bullet points, avoid generic statements that could apply to any business entering any market.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Existing business and strengths: [CURRENT BUSINESS DETAILS]

New market or segment being entered: [NEW MARKET]

- Pro tip: Ask a follow-up question: "Given this SWOT, what are the 3 highest-priority marketing actions for the first 60 days?" to turn the analysis into next steps.

Prompt #49. Research: Target Audience Persona From Client Notes

- Use this when: You have scattered notes about a client's customers and need them organized into a usable persona document.
- The prompt:

Turn these notes into a clear target audience persona for a marketing campaign. Organize it into: demographics/firmographics, goals and motivations, pain points and objections, where they spend time online, and the message that would resonate most with them. Keep it grounded strictly in the notes provided, do not invent details that weren't mentioned.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Raw notes about the audience: [PASTE NOTES, SURVEY RESULTS, OR OBSERVATIONS]

- Pro tip: If you're inventing details because real data is thin, label them clearly as "assumption to validate" so the client knows what's confirmed versus a working guess.

Prompt #50. Analysis: Competitor Social Media Content Comparison

- Use this when: You want to see how a client's social content compares to competitors before recommending changes to their content strategy.
- The prompt:

Compare the social media approach of our client against the competitors listed below. For each, note their apparent posting frequency, content mix (educational, promotional, entertainment, etc.), and one thing they do well. End with 3 specific recommendations for how our client's content could differentiate or improve based on this comparison.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Client's current content approach: [DESCRIBE CURRENT APPROACH]

Competitor 1: [NAME AND WHAT THEY POST]

Competitor 2: [NAME AND WHAT THEY POST]

- Pro tip: Pull actual recent post examples from competitor profiles rather than describing them from memory. Specific input produces specific, usable recommendations.

Prompt #51. Research: Keyword and Messaging Angles Competitors Are Missing

- Use this when: You want to find a messaging gap or content angle competitors haven't claimed, instead of copying what everyone else is already saying.
- The prompt:

Based on the competitor messaging below, identify 5 messaging angles or topics that none of them seem to be using, but that would likely matter to their shared target audience. For each gap, briefly explain why it could work as a differentiator for our client.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Competitor messaging observed: [LIST WHAT COMPETITORS ARE SAYING/CLAIMING]

- Pro tip: The best gaps are usually about a customer worry nobody is addressing out loud, not a clever slogan. Look for what audiences complain about in reviews that competitors never mention.

Prompt #52. Analysis: Pricing Comparison Against Three Competitors

- Use this when: A client wants to know how their pricing stacks up before you build messaging around value or price positioning.
- The prompt:

Compare our client's pricing against the three competitors below. Present it as a simple table, then write 2-3 sentences on where our client sits in the market (premium, mid-market, budget) and one suggestion for how to message price in marketing based on that position, whether that's leading with value, leading with premium quality, or avoiding price mentions entirely.

Client/business name and price: [CLIENT NAME AND PRICE]

Competitor 1 name and price: [NAME AND PRICE]

Competitor 2 name and price: [NAME AND PRICE]

Competitor 3 name and price: [NAME AND PRICE]

- Pro tip: Make sure you're comparing like-for-like offers (same tier, same included features), a pricing table that compares apples to oranges will lead to the wrong positioning advice.

Prompt #53. Research: Summarizing a Client's Customer Reviews for Insights

- Use this when: A client has a pile of Google, Yelp, or Amazon reviews and you want the marketing-relevant patterns pulled out, not just a sentiment score.

- The prompt:

Read through these customer reviews and summarize the patterns. Identify: the 3 most common things customers praise, the 3 most common complaints or concerns, and any recurring phrases customers use that could be reused in marketing copy because they sound authentic. Keep quotes exact, don't paraphrase things customers actually said.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Reviews to analyze: [PASTE A SAMPLE OF REVIEWS, 10-20 IS PLENTY]

- Pro tip: The exact phrases customers use in reviews often make the best headlines and ad copy because they sound like a real person, not a marketer.

Prompt #54. Analysis: Identifying a Client's Unique Selling Proposition

- Use this when: A client can't clearly articulate what makes them different, and you need a sharper unique selling proposition (USP) before you can write any effective marketing.
- The prompt:

Based on the information below, help me identify a clear, specific unique selling proposition for this client. Give me 3 candidate USP statements, each one sentence long, and briefly explain the reasoning behind each. Avoid vague phrases like "quality service" or "customer first," push for something specific and provable.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

What they offer: [OFFER/PRODUCT]

What competitors typically claim: [COMPETITOR CLAIMS]

What customers specifically say they like: [CUSTOMER FEEDBACK, IF KNOWN]

- Pro tip: Test candidate USPs by asking "could a competitor honestly claim this too?" If yes, it's not specific enough yet.

Reporting & Performance Analysis

Prompt #55. Report: Monthly Performance Report Summary in Plain English

- Use this when: You have raw campaign numbers and need to turn them into a client-friendly summary instead of a spreadsheet dump.
- The prompt:

Turn this month's raw performance data into a plain-English summary for a client who isn't a marketing expert. Structure it as: a one-sentence headline takeaway, 3 key metrics with what changed and why it matters, one thing that's working well, and one area to watch. Avoid jargon like "CPA" or "CTR" without explaining what it means in context.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Raw data: [PASTE METRICS, e.g., spend, clicks, conversions, cost per result]

Comparison period: [E.g., "vs. last month"]

- Pro tip: Always lead with the headline takeaway. Busy clients often only read the first line, make it count.

Prompt #56. Analysis: Explaining a Drop in Ad Performance

- Use this when: A specific metric tanked and you need to investigate possible causes before you can explain it to anyone.
- The prompt:

Here's data showing a drop in [METRIC] for this campaign. Walk through the most likely explanations in order of probability (things like seasonality, audience fatigue, increased competition, budget or bid changes, tracking issues), and for each one suggest a quick way to check if that's actually the cause. End with your best guess at the top 1-2 likely reasons.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Metric that dropped: [METRIC]

Data or context: [PASTE RELEVANT DATA, e.g., timeframe, recent changes made]

- Pro tip: Always check for a tracking or pixel issue first. A surprising number of "performance drops" turn out to be a broken tracking tag, not a real decline.

Prompt #57. Report: Quarterly Business Review Talking Points

- Use this when: You have a quarterly business review (QBR) coming up and need to prep talking points that go beyond just reading the slides.
- The prompt:

Create talking points for a quarterly business review with this client. For each major metric or initiative, give me a one-sentence summary of what happened, why, and what we're doing about it next quarter. Then suggest 2 strategic questions to ask the client about their business priorities for the upcoming quarter, so the meeting feels like a partnership conversation, not just a report-out.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Key metrics/initiatives this quarter: [LIST METRICS AND RESULTS]

Upcoming quarter's known priorities, if any: [PRIORITIES]

- Pro tip: Save the strategic questions for the end of the meeting. Leading with numbers first builds credibility before you ask the client to think bigger-picture.

Prompt #58. Analysis: Turning Raw Campaign Data Into 3 Key Insights

- Use this when: You're staring at a spreadsheet of numbers and need to find the story in the data before you can report on it.
- The prompt:

Look at this raw campaign data and pull out the 3 most important insights, not just a restatement of the numbers. For each insight, state what the data shows, why it matters for this client's goals, and one recommended action based on it. Prioritize insights that would actually change what we do next, not just interesting trivia.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Client's primary goal: [GOAL]

Raw data: [PASTE DATA]

- Pro tip: If the AI's insights feel obvious or generic, ask it to dig one level deeper: "what's the insight behind that insight?"

Prompt #59. Report: Comparing This Month to Last Month for a Client

- Use this when: You need a simple month-over-month comparison for a report or update and want the framing done for you, not just a table of numbers.
- The prompt:

Compare this month's performance to last month's using the data below. For each metric, state the percent change and whether that's a good, neutral, or concerning result given the client's goals, not just whether the number went up or down. Write it as a short narrative paragraph, not a bullet list of numbers.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

This month's data: [PASTE DATA]

Last month's data: [PASTE DATA]

Client's primary goal: [GOAL]

- Pro tip: A metric going up isn't automatically good news, and going down isn't automatically bad. Always tie the interpretation back to what the client is actually trying to achieve.

Prompt #60. Analysis: ROI Summary for a Client's Marketing Spend

- Use this when: A client (or their boss, or their accountant) wants a clear answer on whether the marketing spend is paying off.
- The prompt:

Using the numbers below, write a plain-language return-on-investment summary for this client's marketing spend over the period given. Show the math simply (spend, revenue attributed, and the resulting return), note any assumptions or limitations in how that revenue was attributed, and give one honest sentence on whether this is a strong, average, or weak return for a business like this.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Time period: [PERIOD]

Total marketing spend: [SPEND]

Revenue attributed to marketing: [REVENUE]

Attribution method used, if known: [METHOD, e.g., last-click, platform-reported]

- Pro tip: Always disclose the attribution method. Different tracking methods can make the same campaign look wildly different, transparency here builds long-term trust.

Prompt #61. Report: Year-End Recap Deck Talking Points

- Use this when: You're building a year-in-review presentation for a client and need the narrative arc, not just a list of monthly stats.
- The prompt:

Create talking points for a year-end recap presentation for this client. Structure it as: the year's overall story in 2-3 sentences, the top 3 wins with their supporting numbers, one honest challenge and what was learned from it, and a forward-looking close connecting this year's results to next year's plan. Make it feel like a narrative, not a data dump.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Top results this year: [LIST TOP RESULTS/NUMBERS]

A challenge faced this year: [CHALLENGE]

Direction for next year: [NEXT YEAR PLAN OR FOCUS]

- Pro tip: Including one honest challenge (framed constructively) makes the wins more believable. An all-wins recap can come across as less credible to a skeptical client.

Prompt #62. Analysis: Diagnosing Why Leads Aren't Converting to Sales

- Use this when: A campaign is generating leads or traffic, but the client says those leads aren't turning into paying customers, and you need to figure out where the funnel breaks.
- The prompt:

This client is getting leads from our campaigns, but few are converting to sales. Based on the funnel details below, walk through the most likely points of breakdown (lead quality, follow-up speed, sales process, offer mismatch, pricing objections) and suggest what data or questions would help confirm which one is the real issue. Note this may not be a marketing problem at all.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Funnel stage details: [DESCRIBE FUNNEL, e.g., "ad -> landing page -> phone call -> close"]

Lead volume and current conversion rate: [NUMBERS]

What the client has said about the leads: [CLIENT'S FEEDBACK]

- Pro tip: Sit in on (or ask for a recording of) a sales call with a marketing-generated lead before assuming the campaign is the problem. Often the gap is in follow-up speed or the sales pitch, not the ad.

Prompt #63. Report: Dashboard Walkthrough Script for a Client Call

- Use this when: You're about to screen-share a reporting dashboard on a client call and want a script so you don't just read numbers off the screen.
- The prompt:

Write a short script for walking a client through their performance dashboard on a live call. For each key metric on the dashboard, give me one sentence explaining what it means in plain terms and one sentence on why it matters to their business specifically, not a generic definition. End with a transition line into discussing next steps.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Metrics shown on the dashboard: [LIST METRICS]

Client's primary business goal: [GOAL]

- Pro tip: Practice explaining the dashboard without looking at notes first. If you can't explain a metric simply out loud, that's often a sign it doesn't belong on this client's dashboard.

Difficult Conversations & Objection Handling

Prompt #64. Response: Handling a Client Who Wants to Cut the Budget

- Use this when: A client tells you they want to reduce their marketing spend or budget, and you need a thoughtful response instead of just accepting it or arguing.
- The prompt:

A client wants to cut their marketing budget by [PERCENT/AMOUNT]. Write a response that acknowledges their reasoning without being defensive, explains honestly what impact this reduction is likely to have on results, and offers 1-2 alternative options (like reallocating instead of cutting, or a phased reduction) so they don't feel boxed into an all-or-nothing decision.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Requested budget cut: [PERCENT OR AMOUNT]

Likely impact of the cut: [IMPACT, e.g., "fewer leads, longer time to hit goals"]

Alternative option to offer: [ALTERNATIVE, e.g., pause one channel instead of all]

- Pro tip: Never guilt a client for wanting to cut spend, budgets change for real business reasons. Focus the conversation on trade-offs, not loyalty.

Prompt #65. Response: Addressing Scope Creep Without Damaging the Relationship

- Use this when: A client keeps asking for extra work outside the contract, sometimes called scope creep, and you need to draw a line without sounding petty.
- The prompt:

A client keeps requesting work outside our agreed scope. Write a response that's warm but clear: acknowledge the request has value, explain that it falls outside the current scope of work, and offer a path forward, either adding it as a paid add-on or revisiting it at the next contract renewal. Avoid sounding like you're punishing them for asking.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Out-of-scope request: [REQUEST]

Current scope/contract summary: [SCOPE SUMMARY]

Option to offer: [OPTION, e.g., "add-on for $X" or "include in next renewal"]

- Pro tip: Address scope creep the first time it happens, not the fifth. Each unaddressed instance makes the eventual conversation harder, not easier.

Prompt #66. Response: Responding to "We're Thinking of Leaving the Agency"

- Use this when: A client hints they're considering ending the relationship or moving to another agency, and you need to respond thoughtfully, not defensively.
- The prompt:

A client has indicated they're considering ending our engagement or moving to another agency. Write a response that takes the concern seriously without being desperate or overly apologetic, asks a genuine, specific question to understand the real reason behind it, and offers one concrete next step (like a call to discuss, or a specific fix) rather than a vague "let's talk."

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

What they said or signaled: [WHAT THEY SAID]

Relationship history/context: [CONTEXT, e.g., "3 years, recent results dip"]

- Pro tip: Resist the urge to immediately offer a discount. Understand the real reason first, price is rarely the actual issue when a client talks about leaving.

Prompt #67. Response: Explaining Why Results Take Time to a New Client

- Use this when: A newer client is getting impatient early in the engagement and needs a clear, honest explanation of realistic timelines.
- The prompt:

A relatively new client is asking why they haven't seen bigger results yet. Write a response that sets realistic expectations for this type of campaign without sounding like an excuse. Explain what typically happens in this timeframe for campaigns like theirs, share one early positive signal if one exists, and give a specific date or milestone when they can expect a clearer picture.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign/service type: [TYPE]

Time live so far: [TIMEFRAME]

Early positive signal, if any: [SIGNAL OR "none yet"]

Milestone/checkpoint date: [DATE]

- Pro tip: This conversation is much easier if you set timeline expectations clearly during onboarding. Use Prompt #3 to build that expectation-setting in from day one.

Prompt #68. Response: Handling a Client Comparing You to a Cheaper Competitor

- Use this when: A client mentions a cheaper agency or freelancer they're considering instead, and you need to respond without trashing the competitor or sounding defensive about price.
- The prompt:

A client mentioned a cheaper option they're considering instead of our agency. Write a response that doesn't criticize the other option, reframes the conversation around value and outcomes rather than price alone, and asks a clarifying question to understand what's driving the price concern (budget pressure, doubting ROI, or something else). Keep the tone confident, not anxious.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Our differentiator/value point: [VALUE POINT, e.g., dedicated account manager, proven results]

What the client said about the cheaper option: [WHAT THEY SAID]

- Pro tip: If price really is the core issue, it's often more effective to offer a smaller scope at a lower price than to just discount the same scope.

Prompt #69. Email: Delivering Bad News About a Missed Deadline

- Use this when: Your team is going to miss a deadline you promised a client, and you need to tell them before they find out on their own.
- The prompt:

Write an email to a client letting them know a deliverable will be late. Take ownership without over-apologizing, give the real reason briefly and honestly, provide a new, realistic delivery date, and mention what's being done to prevent this from happening again if relevant. Keep it under 100 words, direct and professional.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Deliverable that's late: [DELIVERABLE]

Original deadline: [DATE]

New realistic deadline: [DATE]

Reason for delay: [REASON]

- Pro tip: Send this proactively as soon as you know about the delay. A client who hears it from you first is far more forgiving than one who has to ask where something is.

Prompt #70. Response: Pushing Back on a Client's Bad Creative Idea

- Use this when: A client wants to run a creative direction, headline, or campaign idea you genuinely think will hurt their results, and you need to push back professionally.
- The prompt:

A client wants to move forward with a creative idea I have concerns about. Write a response that respects their input, states the specific concern clearly with reasoning (not just "I don't like it"), and offers an alternative or a way to test both options safely (like a small A/B test) rather than an outright refusal.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Client's proposed idea: [IDEA]

Specific concern: [CONCERN, e.g., "likely to feel too salesy for this audience"]

Alternative or compromise to suggest: [ALTERNATIVE, e.g., small budget test]

- Pro tip: Whenever possible, suggest testing instead of blocking. It respects the client's instincts while still protecting them from a costly full-budget mistake.

Prompt #71. Response: Negotiating a Rate Increase With an Existing Client

- Use this when: You need to raise prices on an existing client relationship and want to do it without triggering churn.
- The prompt:

Write a message to an existing client announcing a rate increase. Give clear advance notice, explain the reason in a way that's about value delivered or rising costs rather than apologetic, state the new rate and effective date clearly, and reaffirm the value of the relationship without sounding like you're trying too hard to justify it.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Current rate: [CURRENT RATE]

New rate: [NEW RATE]

Effective date: [DATE]

Reason for increase: [REASON, e.g., added services, market rate adjustment]

- Pro tip: Give at least 30-60 days notice on rate increases. It reads as respectful rather than sprung-on-them, and gives the client time to plan.

Prompt #72. Response: Responding to a Negative Public Review of the Agency

- Use this when: Your agency itself gets a negative public review (Google, Clutch, social media) and needs a professional public response.
- The prompt:

Write a public response to this negative review about our agency. Acknowledge the concern without being defensive or admitting fault we don't actually have, keep it brief and professional since other potential clients will read this too, and invite the reviewer to continue the conversation privately rather than airing details publicly.

Review content: [PASTE REVIEW]

Our honest take on what happened: [YOUR SIDE OF THE SITUATION]

Contact method to offer: [E.g., "please email us at..."]

- Pro tip: Never argue details point-by-point in a public reply. Keep the public response short and move the real conversation to a private channel every time.

Operations, SOPs & Admin

Prompt #73. SOP: Client Onboarding Process Documentation

- Use this when: You want to write down your client onboarding process so it's consistent no matter who on the team runs it.
- The prompt:

Write a standard operating procedure (SOP) for onboarding a new client at a marketing agency. Format it as a numbered, step-by-step process from contract signed to first deliverable, noting who is responsible for each step (account manager, strategist, designer, etc.) and roughly how many days each step should take. Include a short "common mistakes to avoid" section at the end.

Service type: [SERVICE TYPE]

Team roles involved: [ROLES, e.g., account manager, strategist, designer]

Typical onboarding length: [TIMEFRAME, e.g., 2 weeks]

- Pro tip: Turn this into a checklist in your project management tool once it's finalized, an SOP that only lives in a document tends to get skipped under deadline pressure.

Prompt #74. Checklist: Pre-Launch Campaign QA Checklist

- Use this when: A campaign is about to go live and you want a final quality-check pass so nothing embarrassing slips through.
- The prompt:

Create a pre-launch QA checklist for a [CAMPAIGN TYPE] campaign before it goes live. Cover: creative/copy accuracy (spelling, client name, offer details), tracking setup (pixels, UTM parameters, conversion goals), targeting settings, budget and schedule confirmation, and final client approval. Format as a checkbox list someone can go through in 10 minutes before hitting publish.

Campaign type: [CAMPAIGN TYPE, e.g., paid social, email, Google Ads]

Platform(s): [PLATFORMS]

- Pro tip: Make this checklist a required step in your project management workflow before any campaign can be marked "ready to launch." Catching one broken tracking link before launch saves hours of confused reporting later.

Prompt #75. Email: Internal Handoff Notes Between Account Managers

- Use this when: A client account is being transferred to a new team member and you need clean handoff notes so nothing falls through the cracks.
- The prompt:

Turn these rough notes into a clean internal handoff document for transferring a client account to a new account manager. Organize it into: client background and key contacts, current status and active projects, known sensitivities or history to be aware of, and immediate priorities for the first two weeks. Keep it factual and useful, not a narrative.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

Raw handoff notes: [PASTE NOTES]

New account manager name: [NAME]

- Pro tip: Include "known sensitivities" honestly, past complaints, pricing history, personality quirks. A handoff document that only shares the good news sets the new person up to repeat old mistakes.

Prompt #76. SOP: Creative Approval Workflow for a Client

- Use this when: You want to formalize how creative assets move from your team to client approval so revisions don't spiral out of control.
- The prompt:

Write a creative approval workflow SOP for how assets move from our design team to client sign-off. Include the steps in order, who reviews at each stage internally before it goes to the client, how many rounds of client revisions are included before additional charges apply, and the format clients should use to give feedback (to avoid vague comments like "make it pop").

Client name/type: [CLIENT NAME OR TYPE]

Number of included revision rounds: [NUMBER]

Feedback format to request: [FORMAT, e.g., a numbered comment doc]

- Pro tip: Explicitly stating the number of included revision rounds in writing, and repeating it at the top of every review request, prevents most scope creep arguments before they start.

Prompt #77. Checklist: Monthly Agency Invoicing and Billing Review

- Use this when: It's time to send monthly invoices and you want a checklist to make sure nothing gets billed incorrectly or missed.
- The prompt:

Create a monthly invoicing checklist for a marketing agency to run through before sending client invoices. Cover: confirming hours or deliverables match the contract, checking for any approved scope changes or add-ons that need billing, verifying ad spend pass-throughs are accurate, and a final review step before sending. Format as a simple checkbox list.

Billing structure: [E.g., flat retainer, hourly, retainer plus ad spend pass-through]

Number of active clients: [NUMBER]

- Pro tip: Run this checklist on the same day every month so it becomes a habit instead of a scramble, billing errors are one of the fastest ways to damage client trust.

Prompt #78. Plan: Meeting Agenda for a Weekly Team Standup

- Use this when: Your internal team meetings feel unfocused or run long, and you want a tight agenda structure.
- The prompt:

Create a 15-minute weekly team standup agenda template for a marketing agency team. Structure it around: quick wins from the past week (2 minutes), blockers or items needing help (5 minutes), priorities for this week by person or account (5 minutes), and any announcements (3 minutes). Keep the format simple enough that anyone on the team could run the meeting from it.

Team size: [NUMBER]

Team roles: [ROLES, e.g., account managers, designers, media buyers]

- Pro tip: Time-box each section out loud during the meeting. Standups drift long when "quick wins" quietly becomes a 20-minute status report.

Prompt #79. SOP: New Employee Onboarding for an Account Coordinator

- Use this when: You're hiring or training a new account coordinator and want a structured first-30-days plan instead of throwing them in unprepared.
- The prompt:

Create a 30-day onboarding plan for a new account coordinator at a marketing agency. Break it into Week 1 (orientation and shadowing), Week 2 (supported tasks with review), Week 3-4 (increasing independence), listing specific activities and what "ready to move to the next stage" looks like at each point.

Agency size/type: [SIZE/TYPE]

Tools the coordinator will use: [TOOLS, e.g., project management software, ad platforms]

Key skills to develop: [SKILLS, e.g., client communication, reporting, scheduling]

- Pro tip: Ask for a version formatted as a checklist their manager can literally check off week by week, it turns a vague plan into an accountable one.

Prompt #80. Email: Vendor or Freelancer Brief for a Project

- Use this when: You're bringing in a freelancer or outside vendor (a videographer, translator, specialist) and need to brief them clearly and fast.
- The prompt:

Write a project brief email for a freelancer or vendor joining a client project. Include: the project scope and deliverables expected, the deadline, the client's brand guidelines or tone requirements, who to contact with questions, and the approval process before anything is considered final. Keep it clear enough that a stranger to the account could execute without back-and-forth.

Freelancer/vendor role: [ROLE, e.g., videographer, copywriter, translator]

Project scope: [SCOPE]

Deadline: [DEADLINE]

Point of contact: [NAME]

- Pro tip: Always specify the approval process and who has final sign-off. Vague briefs to outside vendors are the number one cause of expensive, unusable deliverables.

Prompt #81. Checklist: Client Offboarding Process

- Use this when: A client relationship is ending, whether by their choice or yours, and you want to close it out professionally and completely.
- The prompt:

Create a client offboarding checklist for when an engagement ends. Cover: transferring account access and assets back to the client (ad accounts, logins, files), a final performance summary to send, internal steps to stop billing and archive the account, and a professional closing message. Format as a checkbox list a departing account manager can follow without missing a step.

Services provided: [SERVICES]

Assets/access to transfer: [LIST, e.g., ad account admin, Google Analytics, design files]

- Pro tip: Even when a client leaves on bad terms, a clean, professional offboarding is often what determines whether they refer you to someone else later.

Agency-Specific & Specialized Tasks

Prompt #82. Brief: Creative Brief for the Design Team

- Use this when: You need to hand off a project to your design team and want to make sure they have everything they need in one document.
- The prompt:

Write a creative brief for our design team for the project below. Include: project objective, target audience in one sentence, key message, tone/style direction, specific deliverables and sizes/formats needed, deadline, and any brand guidelines or must-include elements. Keep it structured so a designer could start work immediately without needing a follow-up call.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Project: [PROJECT, e.g., "3 static ads for spring promotion"]

Deadline: [DEADLINE]

Brand guidelines/must-includes: [GUIDELINES]

- Pro tip: Attach 1-2 examples of creative the client has liked in the past. Visual references communicate tone faster than written descriptions ever will.

Prompt #83. Brief: Media Buy Brief for Paid Media Team

- Use this when: Strategy is set and you need to hand off targeting, budget, and platform details to whoever is actually building the ad campaigns.
- The prompt:

Write a media buy brief for our paid media team to build out this campaign. Include: campaign objective, total budget and flight dates, platform(s) to use, audience targeting parameters, and the primary metric we're optimizing toward. Format it so someone could build the campaign in-platform directly from this brief without needing clarification.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Objective: [OBJECTIVE]

Budget and dates: [BUDGET AND DATES]

Platforms: [PLATFORMS]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

- Pro tip: Always specify the single primary metric to optimize toward. A media buyer optimizing for clicks builds a very different campaign than one optimizing for purchases.

Prompt #84. Plan: Influencer Outreach List Criteria for a Campaign

- Use this when: A client wants to try influencer marketing and you need to define what "the right influencer" actually means before searching.
- The prompt:

Define the ideal influencer profile for this campaign. Give me criteria across: follower range, content style/niche, audience demographics that should match our target customer, and 2-3 engagement red flags to screen out (like heavy follower purchasing signs or audience mismatch). Then suggest 3 search terms or hashtags we could use to start finding candidates manually.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign goal: [GOAL, e.g., product awareness, direct sales]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Budget range per influencer: [BUDGET RANGE]

- Pro tip: Engagement rate matters more than follower count. An influencer with 10,000 highly engaged followers in your niche usually outperforms one with 100,000 disengaged ones.

Prompt #85. Analysis: Choosing the Right Platform Mix for a New Client's Budget

- Use this when: A new client asks "where should we even advertise" and you need a clear, reasoned recommendation instead of defaulting to whatever's trendy.
- The prompt:

Recommend which advertising platforms this client should start with given their budget and goals. Rank the top 3 platform options in priority order, and for each one explain in plain terms why it fits (or doesn't fully fit) their budget, audience, and goal. Be honest if the budget is too small to run an effective campaign on a platform, rather than recommending it anyway.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Monthly budget: [BUDGET]

Goal: [GOAL]

Target audience: [AUDIENCE]

Platforms client is curious about, if any: [PLATFORMS MENTIONED]

- Pro tip: If the client's budget is genuinely too small for a platform to work well (a common issue with tiny budgets on paid social), say so directly rather than taking the budget and hoping.

Prompt #86. Plan: Crisis Communication Response for a Client PR Issue

- Use this when: A client is facing a PR issue (a bad viral moment, a product problem, an internal scandal going public) and needs a fast, careful communication plan.
- The prompt:

Help draft an initial crisis communication response plan for the situation below. Include: a holding statement that can go out immediately while more facts are gathered, guidance on which channels to respond on versus stay quiet on for now, and 2-3 things to explicitly avoid saying until more is known. Keep tone calm, accountable, and non-defensive.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Situation summary: [DESCRIBE SITUATION]

Channels where it's being discussed: [CHANNELS, e.g., Twitter/X, local news, Reddit]

- Pro tip: For any real crisis involving legal, safety, or major reputational risk, always loop in the client's legal counsel before anything public goes out. This prompt is a starting draft, not a substitute for that review.

Prompt #87. Brief: SEO Content Brief for a Freelance Writer

- Use this when: You're outsourcing a blog post or article and want to brief a freelance writer so the content is usable without three rounds of edits.
- The prompt:

Write a content brief for a freelance writer creating an SEO blog post. Include: target keyword and 2-3 related terms to work in naturally, target word count, the search intent behind the keyword (what the reader actually wants), a suggested outline with headers, and the client's tone of voice. Note that keyword usage should sound natural, not stuffed.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Target keyword: [KEYWORD]

Target word count: [WORD COUNT]

Tone of voice: [TONE]

- Pro tip: Always tell the writer what the reader wants to accomplish by searching that term, not just the keyword itself. Content written to intent ranks and converts better than content written to a keyword alone.

Prompt #88. Plan: Email Automation Flow Outline for a Client

- Use this when: A client wants an automated email sequence (welcome series, abandoned cart, post-purchase) and you need the structure before writing individual emails.
- The prompt:

Outline an automated email flow for the scenario below. List each email in the sequence with its send timing (e.g., "immediately," "day 3," "day 7"), the goal of that specific email, and a one-sentence summary of what it should say. Keep the sequence to 4-6 emails so it's realistic to build and maintain.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Flow type: [TYPE, e.g., welcome series, abandoned cart, post-purchase]

Product/service: [PRODUCT]

Primary goal of the flow: [GOAL]

- Pro tip: Once the outline is approved, run each email individually through Prompt #34's structure to write the full copy for each one.

Prompt #89. Analysis: Attribution Model Explanation for a Client

- Use this when: A client is confused about why different platforms report different numbers for the same campaign, and you need to explain attribution simply.
- The prompt:

Explain to a non-technical client why their Google Ads, Facebook Ads, and Google Analytics numbers don't match, even though they're tracking the same campaign. Use a simple, non-jargon analogy, then explain which number we recommend they trust most for this specific decision and why. Keep the whole explanation under 200 words.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Platforms showing different numbers: [PLATFORMS]

Specific numbers in question: [NUMBERS, IF HELPFUL]

Decision the client is trying to make with this data: [DECISION]

- Pro tip: Anchor the explanation to the specific decision the client is trying to make. Abstract attribution theory is confusing; "which number should I trust to decide X" is not.

Prompt #90. Plan: Agency Rebrand Messaging Workshop Outline

- Use this when: Your own agency (not a client) is rethinking its positioning or messaging and you want a structured workshop instead of an unfocused brainstorm.
- The prompt:

Design a 90-minute internal workshop agenda for reworking our agency's own positioning and messaging. Include: a warm-up exercise to surface how the team currently describes the agency to prospects, a section for identifying gaps between that and where we want to be positioned, and a closing exercise that produces 2-3 draft positioning statements to refine afterward.

Current positioning (in one sentence): [CURRENT POSITIONING]

Reason for revisiting it: [REASON, e.g., new services added, market has shifted]

Attendees: [ROLES/NAMES]

- Pro tip: Run this workshop with people from outside your leadership team included. Junior team members often hear how prospects actually describe you more clearly than the founders do.

Bonus: Power Prompts

These are longer, multi-step prompts that chain several tasks together. They're built for when you want one prompt to do the work of five.

Prompt #91. Power Prompt: Generate a Month of Content From One Service Description

- Use this when: You have almost nothing to start with, just a description of what a client sells, and need a full month of content ideas plus captions in one pass.
- The prompt:

You are a content strategist and copywriter for a marketing agency. Using only the service description below, do the following in order: (1) identify 4 content pillars that make sense for this business, (2) under each pillar, generate 3 post ideas (12 total), (3) write full captions for each of the 12 posts, following the brand voice given, each with a call to action, (4) organize the final output into a simple weekly calendar (Week 1-4) so it's ready to schedule. Show your work at each step, don't skip straight to the final calendar.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Service description: [DESCRIBE WHAT THEY SELL/DO]

Brand voice: [VOICE]

Platform: [PLATFORM, e.g., Instagram, LinkedIn]

- Pro tip: Review and approve the content pillars (step 1) before letting the AI continue to the full captions. Fixing direction early saves you from rewriting 12 captions built on the wrong pillars.

Prompt #92. Power Prompt: Build a Full 90-Day Campaign From a One-Paragraph Brief

- Use this when: A client gives you a rough, one-paragraph description of what they want and you need to turn it into a real, structured campaign plan.
- The prompt:

You are a marketing strategist at an agency. Using the client brief below, build out a complete 90-day campaign plan: (1) restate the likely goal and target audience in your own words so I can confirm you understood correctly, (2) propose a media mix with rough budget percentages, (3) outline the campaign in three 30-day phases with key activities in each, (4) suggest 3 KPIs to track and realistic target ranges for each. Present each section clearly labeled, and flag any assumptions you had to make due to missing information.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

One-paragraph brief from the client: [PASTE ROUGH BRIEF]

Available budget: [BUDGET]

- Pro tip: Pay close attention to step 1. If the AI's restatement of the goal is wrong, everything built after it will be off too, correct it before moving forward.

Prompt #93. Power Prompt: Turn One Case Study Into a Full Cross-Channel Promotion Kit

- Use this when: You landed a great client result and want to squeeze every possible piece of content and promotion out of it across channels, not just one social post.
- The prompt:

You are a content and promotions specialist. Using the case study details below, build a complete promotion kit: (1) a one-paragraph written case study, (2) 3 social media posts highlighting different angles of the result, (3) a short email to send to the client list announcing the win, (4) 2 sales talking points a new business team member could use when pitching similar prospects, (5) one LinkedIn post written in the founder's voice. Clearly label each section.

Client/customer name (or "a client" if anonymous): [NAME OR "a client"]

Result/metric achieved: [RESULT]

How it was achieved: [METHOD]

Founder's name and voice notes, if available: [NAME/VOICE NOTES]

- Pro tip: Get client permission to use their name and numbers publicly before this kit goes anywhere outside internal sales conversations.

Prompt #94. Power Prompt: Diagnose and Fix an Underperforming Campaign End-to-End

- Use this when: A campaign isn't hitting its numbers and you need a structured diagnosis plus an actual action plan, not just a list of possible reasons.
- The prompt:

You are a senior media strategist troubleshooting an underperforming campaign. Using the data and context below: (1) list the most likely causes of underperformance in priority order with your reasoning, (2) for the top 2 causes, suggest a specific diagnostic step to confirm it's really the problem, (3) once confirmed, propose a concrete action plan with what to change and what result to expect, (4) draft a short client-facing summary explaining the issue and the plan in plain English. Keep each section clearly separated.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Campaign type and goal: [CAMPAIGN TYPE AND GOAL]

Performance data: [PASTE DATA]

Anything already tried: [WHAT'S BEEN TRIED, IF ANYTHING]

- Pro tip: Don't skip step 2. Confirming the cause before acting prevents the common mistake of "fixing" the wrong thing and wasting another few weeks of budget.

Prompt #95. Power Prompt: Build a Complete New Business Pitch From a Prospect's Website

- Use this when: You have a pitch coming up and only basic info about the prospect's business, and need to build out a full, tailored pitch fast.
- The prompt:

You are a new business strategist preparing a pitch. Using the information below about this prospect: (1) summarize their likely marketing challenges based on what's described, (2) propose a tailored service approach addressing those challenges, (3) outline a 10-slide pitch deck structure with content suggestions per slide, (4) write 3 discovery call questions to confirm your assumptions are correct before the pitch. Present each section clearly, and note explicitly which parts are assumptions to validate versus confirmed facts.

Prospect business name: [PROSPECT NAME]

Information gathered about them (industry, size, current marketing, website notes): [PASTE INFO/NOTES]

Service we're pitching: [SERVICE]

- Pro tip: Use the discovery questions from step 4 on your actual call before the pitch meeting, not just as filler. Confirmed insight beats an assumption every time in a pitch room.

Prompt #96. Power Prompt: Create a Full Client Onboarding Package From a Signed Contract

- Use this when: A contract just got signed and you need to produce the entire onboarding package (welcome email, questionnaire, kickoff agenda) in one go instead of piecing it together over several days.
- The prompt:

You are an account manager preparing a full onboarding package for a newly signed client. Using the details below, produce: (1) a welcome email introducing the process and next steps, (2) a discovery questionnaire (10-12 questions) to send before the kickoff call, (3) a kickoff call agenda, and (4) a first-30-days timeline showing what the client should expect week by week. Label each section clearly so they can be used or sent separately.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Service(s) starting: [SERVICE(S)]

Primary point of contact on our team: [NAME/ROLE]

Contract length: [LENGTH]

- Pro tip: Save the final output as a template for this service type. The next new client on the same service becomes a 5-minute find-and-replace instead of a rebuild.

Prompt #97. Power Prompt: Turn a Client Complaint Into a Recovery Plan and Follow-Up Sequence

- Use this when: A client is genuinely upset about something (a mistake, a missed deadline, disappointing results) and you need to handle it thoroughly, not just send one apology email and hope it's resolved.
- The prompt:

You are an account director handling a serious client complaint. Using the details below: (1) write an initial response email that takes ownership and proposes a concrete resolution, (2) outline an internal action plan to actually fix the underlying issue, (3) write a follow-up email to send one week later confirming the fix worked, and (4) suggest one relationship-rebuilding gesture appropriate for this situation (not necessarily a discount). Label each part clearly.

Client name: [CLIENT NAME]

What went wrong: [DESCRIBE THE ISSUE]

Impact on the client: [IMPACT]

Relationship history: [E.g., "new client, 2 months in" or "5-year client, first issue"]

- Pro tip: Have a human review and personalize step 1 before sending, even a well-written AI draft can feel impersonal in a moment where the client needs to feel genuinely heard.

Prompt #98. Power Prompt: Build a Quarterly Business Review Deck From Raw Metrics

- Use this when: You have a spreadsheet of quarterly numbers and a QBR on the calendar, and need the whole presentation narrative built from scratch.

- The prompt:

You are preparing a quarterly business review for a client. Using the raw metrics below: (1) identify the 3 most important storylines in the data (not every metric, just what matters), (2) write a one-paragraph executive summary opening the deck, (3) outline slide-by-slide content for a 10-slide QBR deck covering results, insights, challenges, and next quarter's plan, (4) draft 2 forward-looking strategic questions to ask the client at the end. Present clearly labeled sections.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Raw quarterly metrics: [PASTE DATA]

Known priorities for next quarter: [PRIORITIES, IF KNOWN]

- Pro tip: Resist the urge to include every metric on the dashboard. A QBR that highlights 3 real storylines lands better than one that recites 20 numbers.

Prompt #99. Power Prompt: Create a Full Social Media Content System for a New Client

- Use this when: You're starting social media management for a new client from zero and need the whole system (strategy, pillars, calendar, guidelines) built at once.

- The prompt:

You are building a complete social media content system for a new client. Using the information below: (1) define 4 content pillars tied to their business goals, (2) build a 4-week content calendar with post topics assigned to each week (not full captions yet, just topics and pillar), (3) write a one-page brand voice guide for social content, (4) create a simple community management guideline for responding to comments and DMs. Label each section clearly so it can be shared as a standalone reference.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Industry: [INDUSTRY]

Business goals: [GOALS]

Brand voice notes: [VOICE NOTES]

- Pro tip: Once this system is approved, run each week's topics through Prompt #28 to generate the actual captions, this power prompt builds the skeleton, not the final copy.

Prompt #100. Power Prompt: Run a Competitive Repositioning Exercise for a Client Losing Market Share

- Use this when: A client is losing ground to competitors and needs more than a tweak, they need a real look at whether their positioning still makes sense.
- The prompt:

You are a brand strategist helping a client rethink their market position. Using the details below: (1) summarize how the client currently positions itself versus how competitors are positioning themselves, (2) identify where that positioning has become outdated, crowded, or unconvincing, (3) propose 2 alternative positioning directions with reasoning for each, (4) for your recommended direction, draft a new one-sentence positioning statement and 3 messaging pillars to support it. Flag every assumption clearly.

Client/business name: [CLIENT NAME]

Current positioning: [CURRENT POSITIONING]

Competitor positioning observed: [COMPETITOR POSITIONING]

Reason for losing market share, if known: [REASON]

- Pro tip: Treat the output as a strategic starting point for a real conversation with the client's leadership, not a final answer. Repositioning decisions carry real business risk and deserve human judgment on top of this draft.

Prompt-Writing Cheat Sheet

Once you're comfortable using the prompts in this pack, you can start writing your own. Every strong prompt follows the same simple framework: Role, Task, Context, Format, Constraints.

Role: Tell the AI who it should act as. This sets the expertise and voice it draws from.

Example: "You are a senior account manager at a marketing agency."

Task: State exactly what you want done, as a specific action, not a vague topic.

Example: "Write an email explaining why last month's ad results dropped."

Context: Give the real details that make the output specific instead of generic: client name, industry, numbers, past history, brand voice.

Example: "The client is a local HVAC company. Click-through rate dropped 18% due to a platform-wide bidding change, not anything we did differently."

Format: Specify how you want the answer structured: an email, a table, a numbered list, a script, three variations.

Example: "Format it as a short email, under 150 words, with one clear next step at the end."

Constraints: Set the boundaries: tone, length, what to avoid, reading level.

Example: "Keep the tone calm and confident, not apologetic. Avoid jargon like 'CTR' without explaining it."

Putting it together, Example 1 (a full prompt built from the framework):

"You are a senior account manager at a marketing agency [Role]. Write an email explaining why last month's ad results dropped [Task]. The client is a local HVAC company, and click-through rate dropped 18% due to a platform-wide bidding change, not anything we did differently [Context]. Format it as a short email under 150 words with one clear next step at the end [Format]. Keep the tone calm and confident, not apologetic, and avoid unexplained jargon [Constraints]."

Putting it together, Example 2:

"You are a paid social media strategist [Role]. Write 3 Facebook ad variations for a spring sale [Task]. The client sells handmade candles, the audience is women 25-45 who've shopped small businesses before, and the sale is 20% off for one week [Context]. Format each variation with a hook line, two sentences of body copy, and a call to action [Format]. Keep each version under 100 words and match a warm, friendly brand voice, no corporate language [Constraints]."

Once you can write a prompt using all five parts without thinking about it, you'll rarely need a template again, you'll just build the ones you need on the spot.