Fundraising, donor care, grants, and comms prompts built for the person doing five jobs at once

You're the development director, the social media manager, the grant writer, the volunteer coordinator, and the person who answers the phone. This pack hands you 91 ready-to-use ChatGPT and Claude prompts written in real nonprofit language — donor stewardship, LYBUNT lists, logic models, case for support — so you can find the one you need in under 30 seconds, fill in a few blanks, and get a usable draft in under two minutes. No AI experience required. No plugins, no code, no subscription upgrades.

Quick-Start Guide

How to use a prompt: Copy the whole prompt (not just the bracketed parts) → replace every [BRACKET] with your organization's real details → paste into ChatGPT or Claude → read and lightly edit the draft so it sounds like you.

How to find a prompt fast: Use Ctrl+F (Windows) or Cmd+F (Mac) and type the task you're doing — like "thank-you" or "grant report" — and jump straight to it. Prefer browsing? The Table of Contents below is fully clickable, and if you're reading this as a PDF, your PDF reader's bookmark sidebar mirrors the same category and prompt structure so you can navigate without scrolling.

- Add context. The more you tell the AI about your mission, your audience, and your voice, the less generic the output. If a draft feels flat, add a sentence like "Our donors are mostly retirees who give under $250/year" and ask it to try again.
- Iterate, don't settle. Your first result is a draft, not a final answer. Ask follow-up questions like "Make this warmer," "Cut this in half," or "Make the ask more specific."
- Ask for variations. Most prompts in this pack are written to return 2-3 options automatically. If one doesn't, just add "Give me 3 versions" to the end of any prompt.

Which AI tools this works with: Every prompt here is written for the free versions of ChatGPT (chatgpt.com) or Claude (claude.ai). You don't need a paid plan, a plugin, or any technical setup — just a free account and a copy-paste.

1. Donor Communication & Stewardship

Prompt #1 — Email: Personal Thank-You Note for a New Gift

Use this when: A gift just came in and you need a thank-you (also called a gift acknowledgment) that doesn't sound like a form letter.

The prompt:

Act as a development officer at [ORGANIZATION NAME], a nonprofit focused on [MISSION AREA]. Write a warm, personal thank-you note for a donor named [DONOR NAME] who just gave [GIFT AMOUNT] to support [PROGRAM OR FUND NAME]. Mention one specific, concrete way this gift will be used — not vague language like "makes a difference." Keep the tone [TONE, e.g., heartfelt but not overly formal]. Length: under 150 words. End with a specific next step, like an invitation to visit or a link to see impact updates.

Pro tip: Paste in one real detail from your program (a number, a name, a recent story) so the AI has something specific to anchor the thank-you to — generic gratitude is the #1 reason thank-you notes get ignored.

Prompt #2 — Email: Lapsed Donor Win-Back Message

Use this when: You're pulling a lapsed-donor or LYBUNT list (donors who haven't given in 12-18 months) and need to re-engage them without guilt-tripping.

The prompt:

Write a "we miss you" re-engagement email to a donor who last gave to [ORGANIZATION NAME] [TIME SINCE LAST GIFT] ago, supporting [PROGRAM OR FUND NAME]. The tone should feel like a genuine check-in, not a guilt trip. Briefly share one update on what's changed at the organization since their last gift, then invite them back with a low-pressure ask (a specific small gift amount or just "reconnect with us"). Subject line + body, under 200 words.

Pro tip: Ask the AI for 2 subject line options — one curiosity-based, one direct — and A/B test them if your email platform allows it.

Prompt #3 — Email: Convert a One-Time Donor to a Monthly Sustainer

Use this when: You want to upgrade a one-time gift into recurring giving (also called a sustainer or monthly donor program).

The prompt:

Write a short, friendly email inviting a donor who has given [NUMBER] one-time gifts to [ORGANIZATION NAME] to convert to a monthly giving program called [MONTHLY GIVING PROGRAM NAME]. Explain in plain terms why monthly gifts matter more to the organization's stability than the raw dollar amount. Suggest a specific monthly amount based on their past giving of [AVERAGE GIFT AMOUNT]. Keep it under 150 words and end with one clear call to action.

Pro tip: Suggest a monthly amount roughly 1/12th of their average annual gift — it feels small to the donor but adds up to real recurring revenue for you.

Prompt #4 — Plan: Major Donor Cultivation Touchpoint Ideas

Use this when: You need a reason to reach out to a major or mid-level donor (a cultivation touch) without asking for money.

The prompt:

I'm a fundraiser at [ORGANIZATION NAME] and want to strengthen my relationship with a major donor named [DONOR NAME] who cares about [DONOR'S STATED INTEREST/CAUSE AREA]. Suggest 5 non-ask touchpoint ideas I could use this quarter to cultivate the relationship (e.g., sharing relevant articles, program invites, handwritten notes). For each idea, give me a one-sentence script or message I could send. Format as a numbered list.

Pro tip: Tell the AI what season or upcoming event is coming up (year-end, program launch, anniversary) so the touchpoints feel timely instead of random.

Prompt #5 — Letter: Year-End Appeal / Annual Fund Ask

Use this when: You're writing your biggest fundraising ask (annual appeal or year-end appeal) of the year.

The prompt:

Write a year-end appeal letter for [ORGANIZATION NAME], a nonprofit working on [MISSION AREA]. Open with a short story about [ONE SPECIFIC PERSON OR OUTCOME THE ORG HELPED], connect it to the bigger need, and close with a specific dollar ask of [SUGGESTED GIFT AMOUNT] tied to a tangible outcome that amount funds. Use a warm, urgent-but-not-desperate tone. 300-400 words, formatted for direct mail or email.

Pro tip: Ask for a P.S. line separately — appeal letters get read bottom-up as often as top-down, so a strong P.S. with the ask restated performs disproportionately well.

Prompt #6 — Email: Donor Impact Update With No Ask

Use this when: It's been a few months since a gift and you want to show stewardship — what the gift funded — with zero fundraising ask attached.

The prompt:

Write a pure "impact update" email (no fundraising ask) to donors who gave to [PROGRAM OR CAMPAIGN NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Share [1-2 SPECIFIC RESULTS OR NUMBERS] from the program since their gift, and thank them again for making it possible. Close by saying more updates are coming — do not ask for another gift in this email. Under 200 words.

Pro tip: Send at least one pure-impact, zero-ask update between every two appeals — donors who only ever hear "give again" churn faster than donors who see their money working.

Prompt #7 — Note: Donor Giving-Anniversary or Birthday Message

Use this when: You want to acknowledge a donor's giving anniversary or a personal milestone like a birthday.

The prompt:

Write a short, genuine note to a donor named [DONOR NAME] celebrating [MILESTONE, e.g., their 5th year giving to ORGANIZATION NAME / their birthday]. Reference their history of support in one sentence without listing exact dollar amounts. Keep it warm and personal, under 100 words, no ask included.

Pro tip: Pull the "years given" field from your donor CRM (Bloomerang, DonorPerfect, Little Green Light) so this feels personal rather than templated — even one accurate detail changes the whole tone.

Prompt #8 — Email: Employer Matching Gift Reminder

Use this when: You want to boost gift value by reminding donors their employer might offer a corporate match.

The prompt:

Write a short, friendly reminder email or social caption for [ORGANIZATION NAME] donors, letting them know many employers match charitable donations dollar-for-dollar (or more). Explain in 2-3 plain-English sentences how matching gifts typically work and where they'd check with their employer. Include a light call to action to look into it before [DEADLINE, e.g., year-end]. Under 120 words.

Pro tip: Ask for a version formatted as a social media caption too — matching gift reminders work well as short posts, not just emails.

Prompt #9 — Plan: Donor Segmentation by Giving Level

Use this when: You have one donor list and need to message different giving tiers (segments) differently instead of a single blast.

The prompt:

I run fundraising for [ORGANIZATION NAME] and have donors across these giving levels: [LIST GIVING TIERS, e.g., under $100, $100-$999, $1,000+]. Suggest how I should segment my messaging for each tier for an upcoming [CAMPAIGN NAME] appeal — including tone, ask amount, and one thing that should differ in each version. Present as a table with columns: Tier, Tone, Suggested Ask, Key Message Difference.

Pro tip: Feed this table back into the AI afterward and ask it to draft the actual email for just one tier at a time — trying to write all tiers in one shot usually blurs the differences.

2. Grant Writing & Fundraising Proposals

Prompt #10 — Letter: Letter of Inquiry (LOI) to a Funder

Use this when: A foundation requires a short letter of inquiry, or LOI, before you can submit a full grant proposal.

The prompt:

Write a 1-page letter of inquiry to [FOUNDATION/FUNDER NAME] on behalf of [ORGANIZATION NAME], requesting [GRANT AMOUNT] to support [PROGRAM NAME]. Include: the problem we address, our approach, why our organization is positioned to do this work, and the specific outcomes this grant would fund. Match the funder's stated priorities of [FUNDER'S STATED PRIORITIES, from their website or guidelines]. Keep it under 500 words, professional but not stiff.

Pro tip: Paste in 2-3 sentences directly from the funder's mission statement or guidelines — proposals that mirror a funder's own language in the right places score noticeably better with reviewers.

Prompt #11 — Section: Statement of Need for a Grant Proposal

Use this when: You need the "statement of need" (also called a needs statement or problem statement) section of a grant proposal and are staring at a blank page.

The prompt:

Write a needs statement for a grant proposal from [ORGANIZATION NAME] addressing [PROBLEM/ISSUE] in [GEOGRAPHIC AREA/COMMUNITY]. Use these facts and statistics: [PASTE 2-4 STATS OR DATA POINTS]. Structure it as: the scope of the problem, who it affects most, why current solutions fall short, and how it connects to our program. 250-350 words, cite data inline in plain language (not academic citation format).

Pro tip: If you don't have current stats, ask the AI to list 3-4 credible national or state data sources (like Census, CDC, or a relevant national nonprofit) where you could look up numbers — don't let it invent statistics for you.

Prompt #12 — Section: Program Description for a Grant Application

Use this when: A grant application asks you to describe your program in detail.

The prompt:

Write a program description for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME] for a grant proposal. Cover: who we serve (target population and rough numbers served per year), what activities the program includes, how long participants are typically involved, and what staff/partners deliver it. Base this on: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES ABOUT THE PROGRAM]. Write in clear, funder-friendly language, 300-400 words, no jargon.

Pro tip: Give the AI your messiest bullet-point notes rather than trying to write clean sentences first — it's much better at organizing rough information than you might expect.

Prompt #13 — Table: Logic Model / Theory of Change Draft

Use this when: A funder wants a logic model and you've never built one from scratch.

The prompt:

Help me build a simple logic model for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Our inputs/resources are: [LIST RESOURCES]. Our main activities are: [LIST ACTIVITIES]. Structure a logic model as a table with columns: Inputs, Activities, Outputs, Short-Term Outcomes, Long-Term Outcomes/Impact. Fill in reasonable outputs and outcomes based on what I've given you, and flag anywhere you had to guess so I can confirm it.

Pro tip: Always review the "flagged guesses" line by line before submitting — logic models are one place where funders can tell instantly if the connections between activities and outcomes are hand-wavy.

Prompt #14 — Narrative: Grant Budget Line-Item Justification

Use this when: You need to explain grant budget line items (a budget narrative) in plain language.

The prompt:

Write a budget narrative explaining these grant budget line items for [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s [PROGRAM NAME]: [PASTE LINE ITEMS AND AMOUNTS]. For each line item, write 1-2 sentences justifying the cost and connecting it to program delivery. Keep the tone factual and specific, avoiding vague phrases like "as needed." Format as a short paragraph per line item.

Pro tip: Round numbers make budget narratives look padded — if a line item is oddly specific (like $4,283), ask the AI to reflect that precision in the justification instead of smoothing it over.

Prompt #15 — Summary: Grant Proposal Executive Summary

Use this when: You've finished a full grant proposal and need a tight 1-paragraph summary (also called an abstract) at the top.

The prompt:

Here is my full grant proposal for [PROGRAM NAME]: [PASTE FULL PROPOSAL OR KEY SECTIONS]. Write a 150-word executive summary that a busy program officer could read in 30 seconds and understand: the need, our solution, the amount requested, and the expected outcome. No filler sentences.

Pro tip: Write the executive summary last, always — it's the section funders read first but should be the section you write after everything else is finalized.

Prompt #16 — Report: Grant Outcomes Report to a Funder

Use this when: A funder requires a grant report (also called an outcomes report or final report) on how their money was used.

The prompt:

Write a grant outcomes report to [FUNDER NAME] covering their [GRANT AMOUNT] gift to [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], for the period [REPORTING PERIOD]. Use these results: [PASTE OUTCOMES/NUMBERS/STORIES]. Structure it as: brief recap of the grant's purpose, key outcomes achieved (with numbers), one short story or quote illustrating impact, and any challenges or lessons learned. Professional, honest tone — including one honest challenge builds more trust than a report that sounds perfect. 400-500 words.

Pro tip: Always include one genuine challenge or adjustment you made — funders trust reports more when they're not 100% rosy, and it sets up your next ask more credibly.

Prompt #17 — Analysis: Funder Prospect Research Summary

Use this when: You've found a new foundation and need to quickly vet the fit (funder prospecting) before spending hours on a proposal.

The prompt:

I'm evaluating whether [FOUNDATION/FUNDER NAME] is a good fit for [ORGANIZATION NAME], which works on [MISSION AREA]. Based on this information about the funder: [PASTE WHAT YOU KNOW — website text, past grantee list, focus areas], summarize in a short brief: their apparent priorities, whether our program aligns, red flags or unclear fit, and 2-3 questions I should try to answer before applying (like typical grant size or geographic restrictions).

Pro tip: Don't ask the AI to guess a funder's typical grant size or deadlines from memory — those change yearly and it may be wrong; have it flag that you need to verify those on the funder's current site.

Prompt #18 — Case: Multi-Year Funding Request

Use this when: You're asking a funder to commit to multiple years (multi-year or general operating support) instead of a one-time gift.

The prompt:

Write the case for multi-year funding as part of a proposal to [FUNDER NAME] for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Explain why a [NUMBER]-year commitment of [ANNUAL AMOUNT] per year produces better outcomes than a single one-time grant of the same total — focus on program stability, ability to hire/retain staff, and long-term outcome measurement. 200-250 words, direct and confident tone.

Pro tip: Lead with what instability costs the program (staff turnover, interrupted services) rather than what stability would be nice to have — funders respond more to concrete risk than to aspiration.

3. Social Media & Content Marketing

Prompt #19 — Post: Impact Story Social Media Caption

Use this when: You have a program success story and need it turned into a scroll-stopping social post.

The prompt:

Write an Instagram/Facebook caption for [ORGANIZATION NAME] sharing this story: [PASTE ROUGH STORY DETAILS OR NOTES]. Open with a hook in the first line (not "We're excited to share..."). Keep it under 150 words, end with a soft call to action to [DESIRED ACTION, e.g., visit our website, donate, share]. Include a suggestion for 5 relevant hashtags.

Pro tip: Ask for 3 different opening-line options and pick the one that would make YOU stop scrolling — the first sentence does 80% of the work on social media.

Prompt #20 — Post: Behind-the-Scenes "Day in the Life" Caption

Use this when: You want to humanize your organization with behind-the-scenes content instead of another "big ask" post.

The prompt:

Write a behind-the-scenes social media caption showing what a typical day looks like for [ROLE, e.g., a case manager / a volunteer / a program staff member] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Base it on: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES ABOUT THEIR DAY]. Keep the tone light, human, and specific — avoid generic phrases like "making a difference every day." Under 120 words.

Pro tip: Behind-the-scenes content consistently outperforms polished announcement posts — schedule one of these for every 3-4 promotional posts.

Prompt #21 — Post: Volunteer Spotlight Social Media Post

Use this when: You want to publicly recognize a volunteer and drive more volunteer signups at the same time.

The prompt:

Write a volunteer spotlight social media post for [ORGANIZATION NAME] featuring a volunteer named [VOLUNTEER NAME] who [WHAT THEY DO/HOW LONG]. Include one quote-style line that sounds like something they might say about why they volunteer. End with a call to action for others to sign up to volunteer, linking to [VOLUNTEER SIGNUP LINK/PAGE]. Under 130 words.

Pro tip: Send the draft to the volunteer for approval before posting — even an AI-written "quote" attributed to a real person should get their sign-off.

Prompt #22 — Post: Awareness Statistic / Shareable Stat Caption

Use this when: You want to raise awareness about the issue you work on using a shareable statistic or fact.

The prompt:

Write a short, shareable social media caption built around this statistic: [PASTE STATISTIC AND SOURCE]. Make the stat the hook in the first sentence, briefly explain why it matters, and connect it to what [ORGANIZATION NAME] is doing about it. End with a specific call to action. Under 100 words, written for a graphic/carousel post, not a long-form caption.

Pro tip: Always double-check any statistic before posting — ask the AI to flag if it's unsure of the source, and verify the number yourself against the original source before it goes live.

Prompt #23 — Plan: Repurpose One Piece of Content Into 5 Social Posts

Use this when: You have one piece of long content (a blog post, newsletter, or report) and need to stretch it into multiple social posts.

The prompt:

Here is a piece of content from [ORGANIZATION NAME]: [PASTE BLOG POST, NEWSLETTER SECTION, OR REPORT EXCERPT]. Turn it into 5 separate social media posts for different platforms: 2 for Instagram/Facebook (short, visual-friendly), 2 for LinkedIn (slightly more professional tone), and 1 for a short-form video script (30 seconds, spoken). Format each clearly labeled by platform.

Pro tip: Repurposing one piece of content into 5 posts is the single highest-leverage prompt in this pack for a time-strapped comms team — use it on every newsletter and blog post you publish.

Prompt #24 — Plan: Giving Tuesday / Campaign Countdown Post Series

Use this when: You're running a time-bound campaign like Giving Tuesday and need a week of countdown posts at once.

The prompt:

Write a 5-post social media countdown series leading up to [CAMPAIGN NAME, e.g., Giving Tuesday] for [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Our goal is [CAMPAIGN GOAL, e.g., raise $10,000 for PROGRAM]. Each post should build urgency without being repetitive — vary the angle (a story, a stat, a matching gift mention, a countdown reminder, a final push). Label each post by day (5 days out, 3 days out, day-of, etc.) with caption text for each.

Pro tip: Ask for the final "day-of" post to be written twice — once for morning, once for evening — so you have a natural reason to post about the campaign twice on the actual day.

Prompt #25 — Post: LinkedIn Thought Leadership Post for Your ED

Use this when: Your executive director or program lead wants to build credibility and visibility on LinkedIn.

The prompt:

Write a LinkedIn post in the voice of [NAME/TITLE, e.g., Executive Director] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], sharing a perspective on [TOPIC/TREND RELATED TO YOUR MISSION]. Base it on this rough take: [PASTE ROUGH THOUGHTS OR NOTES]. Open with a strong first line, include one specific example or data point, and end with a question to invite comments. Under 200 words, confident but not preachy tone.

Pro tip: Ask for the post to end with an open-ended question rather than a call to action — LinkedIn's algorithm favors posts that generate comments, and questions outperform "click here" asks.

Prompt #26 — Calendar: Monthly Social Media Content Calendar

Use this when: You need a full month of social content planned out but only have a few program updates to work with.

The prompt:

Build a 4-week social media content calendar for [ORGANIZATION NAME], posting [NUMBER] times per week. We have these upcoming events/updates: [LIST 3-5 THINGS HAPPENING THIS MONTH]. Fill in the remaining slots with a mix of: impact stories, behind-the-scenes, educational/awareness content, and volunteer or donor recognition. Format as a table: Week, Day, Content Type, Caption Idea (1 sentence).

Pro tip: Once you have the calendar, come back and run each row through Prompt #19 or #20 one at a time to get the full caption — the calendar is your outline, not your finished copy.

Prompt #27 — Response: Reply to a Negative Social Media Comment

Use this when: Someone leaves a critical or hostile comment on a social post and you need a calm, public-facing reply.

The prompt:

Someone left this comment on our social media post: [PASTE COMMENT]. Write a calm, professional public reply from [ORGANIZATION NAME] that doesn't sound defensive, acknowledges any valid point without over-apologizing, and redirects to a private channel if the issue needs more discussion. Keep it under 60 words. Do not argue or get pulled into a back-and-forth tone.

Pro tip: Have a teammate read the reply before posting if the comment touches anything sensitive or political — a second set of eyes catches tone problems the writer is too close to see.

4. Email Campaigns & Newsletters

Prompt #28 — Newsletter: Monthly Email Newsletter Draft

Use this when: It's e-newsletter time and you have scattered updates but no draft yet.

The prompt:

Write a monthly email newsletter for [ORGANIZATION NAME] covering these updates: [LIST 3-5 UPDATES/STORIES/UPCOMING EVENTS]. Structure it as: a short opening note (2-3 sentences), then each update as its own short section with a header, then a closing call to action to [DESIRED ACTION]. Keep the overall tone [TONE, e.g., warm and conversational]. Include a suggested subject line.

Pro tip: Ask for 3 subject line options ranked by likely open rate, and note that questions and specific numbers in subject lines typically outperform generic phrases like "Newsletter - March."

Prompt #29 — Email: Event Invitation

Use this when: You need to promote an upcoming event to your email list.

The prompt:

Write an email inviting [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s email list to [EVENT NAME] happening on [DATE] at [LOCATION]. The event is for [PURPOSE, e.g., fundraising gala / volunteer appreciation / community open house]. Include why they should attend, what to expect, and a clear registration call to action linking to [REGISTRATION LINK]. Under 200 words, include a subject line.

Pro tip: Plan for 3 emails per event (save-the-date, invitation, last-chance reminder) rather than one — ask the AI to draft all three in one go so you can schedule them in advance.

Prompt #30 — Email: Welcome Message for New Subscribers or Donors

Use this when: Someone just joined your email list or made their first gift and needs an automated welcome message.

The prompt:

Write a welcome email for someone who just [SUBSCRIBED TO OUR NEWSLETTER / MADE THEIR FIRST GIFT] to [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Introduce our mission in 2 sentences, tell them what to expect from us (how often we email, what kind of content), and include one easy next step they could take (follow on social, share with a friend, etc.). Warm, welcoming tone, under 150 words.

Pro tip: This is a "set it and forget it" email — write it once, load it into your email platform's automation, and it'll work in the background for every new subscriber going forward.

Prompt #31 — Email: Program Update With No Ask

Use this when: You want to keep supporters informed about a specific program without a fundraising ask attached.

The prompt:

Write an email update on [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME] for our supporter email list. Share these updates: [PASTE PROGRAM NOTES/NUMBERS/MILESTONES]. Keep the tone informative and proud without being salesy. No donation ask in this email — the goal is just to keep people engaged and informed. Under 250 words.

Pro tip: Rotate pure-update emails with ask emails roughly 2-to-1 — supporters who only ever receive fundraising asks unsubscribe at a noticeably higher rate.

Prompt #32 — Email: Re-Engagement for Inactive Subscribers

Use this when: You want to clean your list by re-engaging people (a win-back or list-cleaning email) who haven't opened emails in a while.

The prompt:

Write a re-engagement email for subscribers to [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s email list who haven't opened an email in [TIME PERIOD]. Ask directly if they'd like to keep hearing from us, share one compelling update to remind them why they signed up, and include a clear option to stay subscribed or update their preferences. Friendly, no-guilt tone, under 150 words.

Pro tip: Anyone who doesn't engage with this email is a candidate to remove from your list — a smaller, engaged list improves your deliverability and open rates for everyone else.

Prompt #33 — Email: Survey or Feedback Request

Use this when: You want input (a survey or feedback form) from donors, volunteers, or program participants.

The prompt:

Write a short email asking [AUDIENCE, e.g., donors / volunteers / program participants] of [ORGANIZATION NAME] to fill out a [LENGTH]-minute survey about [SURVEY TOPIC]. Explain briefly why their input matters and how it will be used. Include a placeholder link to the survey. Keep it under 100 words — people are more likely to respond to a short ask.

Pro tip: Mention a specific, believable time estimate ("takes about 3 minutes") — vague asks like "a quick survey" get skipped more often than ones with a concrete number attached.

Prompt #34 — Sequence: 4-Email Fundraising Campaign Series

Use this when: You're launching a campaign and need a full email sequence or drip series, not just one message.

The prompt:

Write a 4-email sequence for a fundraising campaign called [CAMPAIGN NAME] with a goal of [GOAL AMOUNT] to support [PROGRAM/PURPOSE]. Email 1: launch announcement. Email 2: a story-driven email midway through. Email 3: a progress update showing how close we are to goal. Email 4: final urgency/deadline email. Give each a subject line and full body, under 200 words each.

Pro tip: Ask the AI to reference the previous email's theme in each new one ("as I mentioned last week...") so the sequence feels like a connected story instead of four separate asks.

Prompt #35 — Email: "Ask a Question" Engagement Email

Use this when: You want to boost email replies and engagement without asking for money.

The prompt:

Write a short email from [ORGANIZATION NAME] asking our supporters a genuine question related to [TOPIC, e.g., what they'd like to see more of / their connection to our cause]. Make it feel like a real question, not a survey. Invite them to just hit reply. Under 100 words, casual and conversational tone.

Pro tip: Actually read and respond to a few replies personally — this prompt works because it feels human, and a canned auto-response undoes that trust immediately.

Prompt #36 — Email: End-of-Campaign Thank-You and Results

Use this when: A campaign just wrapped and you need to report final results and say thank you.

The prompt:

Write a campaign results email for [CAMPAIGN NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. We raised [FINAL AMOUNT] against a goal of [GOAL AMOUNT] from [NUMBER] donors. Thank supporters, share the final number with genuine excitement (or honest framing if the goal wasn't fully met), and tell them one specific next step for how the funds will be used. Under 200 words.

Pro tip: If you fell short of the goal, ask the AI specifically for language that stays honest and forward-looking rather than apologetic — donors respond better to "here's what we'll still accomplish" than to an email that sounds like a failure report.

5. Volunteer Recruitment & Management

Prompt #37 — Post: Volunteer Recruitment Post or Email

Use this when: You need to fill volunteer shifts or open roles and want a compelling recruitment ask.

The prompt:

Write a volunteer recruitment post/email for [ORGANIZATION NAME] promoting a role called [ROLE NAME]. The role involves [BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF TASKS], requires [TIME COMMITMENT], and is a good fit for someone who [TYPE OF PERSON/SKILLS]. Include what makes this role meaningful (not just what's required) and a clear signup call to action linking to [SIGNUP LINK]. Under 150 words.

Pro tip: Lead with the impact of the role, not the time commitment — "help 20 kids learn to read" recruits better than "2 hours every Tuesday," even though both facts belong in the post.

Prompt #38 — Description: Volunteer Role Description

Use this when: You're creating a formal volunteer job description for a new position.

The prompt:

Write a volunteer role description for [ROLE NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Include: a short role summary, key responsibilities (bullet list), time commitment, any required skills or qualifications, what training or support is provided, and who they'll report to. Base it on these rough notes: [PASTE NOTES ABOUT THE ROLE]. Format for posting on a volunteer matching site like VolunteerMatch or Idealist.

Pro tip: Ask for a "why this role matters" sentence at the top separate from the responsibilities list — role descriptions that lead with duties instead of purpose get fewer applicants.

Prompt #39 — Email: Volunteer Onboarding Welcome Message

Use this when: A new volunteer just signed up and needs a warm, clear first message.

The prompt:

Write a welcome message for a new volunteer joining [ORGANIZATION NAME] as a [ROLE NAME].

Cover: a warm welcome, what to expect for their first day/shift, any paperwork or training they still need to complete, and who to contact with questions. Friendly and organized tone, under 200 words.

Pro tip: Ask for this to be formatted with a short checklist at the end — new volunteers retain "what do I do next" information far better as a checklist than as a paragraph.

Prompt #40 — Message: Volunteer Appreciation Note

Use this when: You want to thank volunteers, individually or as a group, for their time.

The prompt:

Write a volunteer appreciation message for [ORGANIZATION NAME] to send to volunteers who contributed [NUMBER] hours / helped with [SPECIFIC EVENT OR PROGRAM]. Acknowledge specifically what their time made possible, not just "thank you for your service." Keep it genuine and under 120 words. Suggest this works as an email, but note it could also be adapted for a printed card.

Pro tip: Ask for a version that names a specific outcome ("because of you, 40 families got groceries this month") — specific appreciation is remembered longer than general appreciation.

Prompt #41 — Reminder: Volunteer Shift Reminder

Use this when: You need a quick, friendly reminder before a scheduled volunteer shift.

The prompt:

Write a short reminder text or email for volunteers signed up for [SHIFT/EVENT NAME] on [DATE/TIME] at [LOCATION]. Include what to bring or wear if relevant, where to check in, and a quick line of appreciation for them showing up. Under 60 words, casual and friendly tone.

Pro tip: Ask for a text-message-length version separately from the email version — reminders sent as texts have much higher read rates than reminder emails for same-day shifts.

Prompt #42 — Message: Volunteer Exit and Feedback Request

Use this when: A long-term volunteer is stepping away and you want to close the loop well.

The prompt:

Write a message to a volunteer named [VOLUNTEER NAME] who is stepping away from their role as [ROLE NAME] after [LENGTH OF SERVICE] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Thank them warmly and specifically, invite honest feedback about their experience, and leave the door open for them to return or stay connected as a donor/supporter in the future. Under 150 words.

Pro tip: Always include the "door open" line — a volunteer who leaves on a warm note is one of your best future donor or return-volunteer prospects.

Prompt #43 — Pitch: Corporate or Group Volunteer Day Pitch

Use this when: You're trying to recruit a company or group for a team volunteer day (corporate social responsibility, or CSR, outreach).

The prompt:

Write a pitch email to a local business or company proposing a corporate volunteer day with [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Describe 2-3 possible volunteer projects that would work well for a group of [GROUP SIZE], explain the impact, and note any logistics (timing, location, what we'd provide). Include a professional but enthusiastic tone, aimed at an HR or CSR contact. Under 200 words.

Pro tip: Mention that you can provide photos, a recap, or social media recognition for the company afterward — many corporate CSR programs need that content to justify the day internally, and offering it upfront makes you easier to say yes to.

Prompt #44 — Outline: Volunteer Training / Orientation Script

Use this when: You need a script or outline to run a volunteer orientation or training session.

The prompt:

Build a 30-minute volunteer orientation outline for new volunteers at [ORGANIZATION NAME] joining as [ROLE TYPE]. Cover: welcome/mission overview (5 min), role expectations and logistics (10 min), safety/policy essentials (10 min), and Q&A (5 min). For each section, give me 3-4 bullet talking points based on: [PASTE KEY POLICIES/DETAILS TO COVER].

Pro tip: Ask the AI to flag which sections should be handouts versus spoken content — orientation sessions run more smoothly when policy details are given as a leave-behind rather than read aloud.

Prompt #45 — Newsletter: Volunteer-Only Update

Use this when: You want to keep your active volunteer base informed and engaged between shifts.

The prompt:

Write a short volunteer-only newsletter update for [ORGANIZATION NAME] covering: [LIST 2-3 UPDATES, e.g., upcoming shifts needed, a recent win, a volunteer shoutout]. Keep the tone like an update from a teammate, not a formal announcement. Under 200 words, include a section header for each update.

Pro tip: Include one open volunteer need with a direct signup link in every issue — a volunteer newsletter is one of your highest-converting channels for filling last-minute shifts.

6. Board & Stakeholder Communication

Prompt #46 — Agenda: Board Meeting Agenda

Use this when: You need to build a clear agenda ahead of a board of directors meeting.

The prompt:

Build a board meeting agenda for [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s [QUARTERLY/MONTHLY] board meeting on [DATE]. We need to cover: [LIST TOPICS, e.g., financial update, program report, upcoming event, ED report]. Allocate reasonable time blocks for a [MEETING LENGTH]-minute meeting, and note which items are informational versus require a board vote. Format as a numbered agenda with time estimates.

Pro tip: Ask the AI to flag any agenda item that seems too big to cover in its allotted time — packed agendas are the #1 reason board meetings run long and important items get rushed.

Prompt #47 — Report: Executive Director's Report to the Board

Use this when: You need to summarize the last quarter or month for your board (an ED report).

The prompt:

Write an Executive Director's report to the board of [ORGANIZATION NAME] covering [TIME PERIOD]. Include these updates: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES ON PROGRAMS, FINANCES, STAFFING, CHALLENGES]. Structure it as: key wins, challenges/risks the board should know about, financial snapshot, and 1-2 decisions or input needed from the board. Clear, direct, no filler. 400-500 words.

Pro tip: Always include the "challenges/risks" section honestly — boards that only hear good news can't help you when you actually need them, and it erodes trust when problems surface later that weren't flagged.

Prompt #48 — Pitch: Board Member Recruitment Message

Use this when: You're recruiting a new board member and need to explain the opportunity (board development).

The prompt:

Write a board recruitment message for [ORGANIZATION NAME], inviting a prospective board member named [NAME] to consider joining. Explain our mission in 2 sentences, what we're looking for in this board seat (e.g., [SKILL/EXPERTISE NEEDED]), the time commitment ([MEETINGS PER YEAR, GIVE/GET EXPECTATION IF ANY]), and why we think they'd be a great fit based on [WHAT YOU KNOW ABOUT THEM]. Warm, respectful tone, under 200 words.

Pro tip: Name the specific skill gap you're filling ("we need someone with financial oversight experience") rather than a generic pitch — people are more likely to say yes when they understand exactly why they were asked.

Prompt #49 — Minutes: Board Meeting Minutes Cleanup

Use this when: You have rough, messy notes from a board meeting and need clean, official minutes.

The prompt:

Here are my rough notes from [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s board meeting on [DATE]: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES]. Turn these into clean, professional board meeting minutes. Include: attendance, items discussed, any motions made and their outcomes (pass/fail/tabled), and action items with owners. Use standard nonprofit board minutes formatting.

Pro tip: Always have the board chair or secretary review AI-cleaned minutes against their own notes before they're filed — minutes are a legal record, and any motion or vote detail needs to be verified for accuracy, not assumed correct.

Prompt #50 — Update: Stakeholder Update for a Government or Institutional Partner

Use this when: You need to update a government agency, school district, or institutional funder/partner on a partnership's progress.

The prompt:

Write a formal update to [PARTNER ORGANIZATION/AGENCY NAME] on the progress of our partnership around [PARTNERSHIP PURPOSE]. Cover: what's been accomplished since [LAST UPDATE DATE], any challenges or delays, and what's planned next. Use a professional, straightforward tone appropriate for [TYPE OF INSTITUTION, e.g., a school district administrator]. 250-300 words.

Pro tip: Ask for a version with a one-line executive summary at the top — institutional readers often forward these to people who won't read the full update, and a strong summary line ensures the key point survives.

Prompt #51 — Section: Annual Report "Year in Review" Narrative

Use this when: You're pulling together your annual report and need the narrative section written.

The prompt:

Write the "Year in Review" narrative section of [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s annual report for [YEAR]. Use these highlights: [PASTE KEY NUMBERS, MILESTONES, STORIES]. Structure it as an engaging but factual 300-400 word summary covering our impact, what changed this year, and a forward-looking closing line about what's next. Written for a mixed audience of donors, board members, and community partners.

Pro tip: Draft this section before the design/layout process starts, not during — annual reports read much better when the writing drives the design instead of getting squeezed to fit a template.

Prompt #52 — Talking Points: Media or Public Statement Prep

Use this when: Your ED or a spokesperson needs quick talking points before an interview or public comment (media prep).

The prompt:

Prepare 5 talking points for [SPOKESPERSON NAME/TITLE] at [ORGANIZATION NAME] ahead of [OCCASION, e.g., a local news interview / a community forum] about [TOPIC]. Each talking point should be one clear, quotable sentence backed by a specific fact or example we can point to: [PASTE RELEVANT FACTS/CONTEXT]. Keep the tone confident and on-message, avoiding anything that sounds defensive.

Pro tip: Ask for a version of each talking point trimmed to under 15 words — the shorter version is what actually gets quoted, and it's easier to remember on the spot.

Prompt #53 — Charter: Board Committee Charter / Terms of Reference

Use this when: You're formalizing a board committee (finance, governance, development) and need a clear charter.

The prompt:

Draft a committee charter for the [COMMITTEE NAME, e.g., Finance Committee] of [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s board. Include: purpose, key responsibilities, membership composition and term length, meeting frequency, and how it reports back to the full board. Base this on standard nonprofit governance practice, and flag anywhere our specific bylaws should be checked instead of assuming a default.

Pro tip: Always cross-check the draft against your actual bylaws before adopting it — committee structure and authority often need to align with language already baked into your governing documents.

Prompt #54 — Message: Thank-You to an Outgoing Board Member

Use this when: A board member's term is ending and they deserve a proper send-off.

The prompt:

Write a thank-you message (suitable for a card or a short speech) to an outgoing board member named [NAME] who served [LENGTH OF TERM] on the board of [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Reference 1-2 specific contributions they made: [PASTE SPECIFIC CONTRIBUTIONS]. Warm and genuine tone, under 150 words.

Pro tip: Ask for both a written card version and a shorter spoken version — you'll likely want to say something out loud at their final meeting in addition to giving them something in writing.

7. Program Design & Impact Reporting

Prompt #55 — Summary: Program Outcomes Summary From Raw Data

Use this when: You need to translate raw program data into a readable outcomes (impact) summary.

The prompt:

Turn this raw program data into a clear outcomes summary for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], covering [TIME PERIOD]: [PASTE RAW NUMBERS/DATA]. Distinguish clearly between outputs (what we did — e.g., number served) and outcomes (what changed for participants — e.g., skills gained, conditions improved). Format as a short summary followed by 3-5 key stats presented as bullet points.

Pro tip: If your data only shows outputs (people served, sessions held) and no outcomes, ask the AI to suggest 2-3 simple outcome questions you could start tracking — funders increasingly expect outcomes, not just activity counts.

Prompt #56 — Story: Client or Participant Success Story Write-Up

Use this when: A staff member shares a great client story and you need it turned into a polished, appropriately anonymized write-up.

The prompt:

Turn these rough notes about a program participant into a polished success story for [ORGANIZATION NAME]: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES]. Change identifying details to protect privacy (use a first name only or a pseudonym, and note this in brackets). Structure it as: their situation before, what our program provided, and where they are now. Warm, respectful, non-exploitative tone — avoid "poverty porn" framing that reduces the person to their hardship. 200-300 words.

Pro tip: Always get informed consent from the participant (or guardian) before publishing their story anywhere, even with a changed name — ask the AI to include a placeholder reminder line to confirm consent was obtained.

Prompt #57 — Design: Program Evaluation Survey Questions

Use this when: You need to design a participant survey to measure program outcomes (an evaluation instrument).

The prompt:

Design a [NUMBER]-question survey to measure outcomes for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Our program is intended to improve [SPECIFIC OUTCOME, e.g., job readiness / reading level / food security]. Include a mix of scaled (1-5) and open-ended questions, and suggest whether each should be asked before, during, or after program participation. Format as a table: Question, Type, Timing.

Pro tip: Keep the survey under 10 questions for participant surveys — completion rates drop sharply past that point, and a shorter survey you actually get filled out beats a thorough one that gets abandoned.

Prompt #58 — Memo: Program Options Comparison Memo

Use this when: Your team is deciding between a few program design options and needs a clear-eyed comparison.

The prompt:

I'm deciding between these program approaches for [PROGRAM GOAL]: [LIST 2-3 OPTIONS WITH BRIEF DESCRIPTIONS]. Write a comparison memo covering the pros, cons, rough cost implications, and staffing implications of each option. End with a neutral recommendation of what questions we should answer before deciding, rather than picking for us. Format as a table plus a short summary paragraph.

Pro tip: Explicitly ask the AI not to pick a "winner" — its job here is to organize the tradeoffs clearly so your team can decide, not to make the call for you.

Prompt #59 — Case: Case for Support for Program Expansion

Use this when: You're making the internal or funder-facing case to expand or add a new program.

The prompt:

Write a case for support for expanding [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME] to [NEW SCOPE, e.g., a second location / a new age group / double the current capacity]. Cover: the evidence this program works (based on [CURRENT OUTCOMES/DATA]), the unmet need that justifies expansion, what expansion would require (staffing, budget, timeline), and the expected impact. 350-450 words, confident and evidence-based tone.

Pro tip: Lead with your existing program's proof points before making the case for expansion — funders and boards are far more willing to fund "more of what's already working" than an untested new idea.

Prompt #60 — Rewrite: Client Intake Form Plain-Language Cleanup

Use this when: Your intake forms are clunky, jargon-heavy, or intimidating to the people filling them out.

The prompt:

Here is our current client intake form language for [PROGRAM NAME]: [PASTE CURRENT FORM TEXT]. Rewrite it in plain, warm, 6th-grade reading level language that would feel approachable to someone accessing services for the first time. Keep all the same required information fields, just simplify the wording and framing around each one.

Pro tip: Ask for the rewritten form to be reviewed specifically for anything that could feel judgmental or bureaucratic (e.g., "explain your situation") and softened — intake language shapes whether people feel safe enough to actually complete the form.

Prompt #61 — Outline: New Program Staff Training Plan

Use this when: You're onboarding new program staff and need a structured first-week training plan.

The prompt:

Build a first-week training outline for a new [STAFF ROLE, e.g., case manager] joining [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Cover: program overview and mission alignment (day 1), key policies and required trainings (days 1-2), shadowing/hands-on practice (days 2-4), and a check-in/Q&A (day 5). For each day, list 3-4 specific topics based on: [PASTE KEY PROGRAM POLICIES/PROCEDURES].

Pro tip: Ask the AI to flag which topics involve compliance or safety requirements (like mandated reporting) — those sections should be reviewed by someone with the right expertise, not finalized from an AI draft alone.

Prompt #62 — Summary: Plain-Language External Evaluation Report Summary

Use this when: You have a dense external evaluation report and need a plain-language summary for your board or newsletter.

The prompt:

Here is an excerpt from an external evaluation report on [PROGRAM NAME]: [PASTE REPORT EXCERPT]. Summarize the key findings in plain, non-academic language suitable for a board update or newsletter. Focus on: what the evaluation found worked well, what it found needs improvement, and 1-2 recommended next steps. Under 300 words.

Pro tip: Ask for a separate one-paragraph version specifically for a public-facing newsletter, since board updates can include more nuance and caveats than what you'd want to share externally.

Prompt #63 — Narrative: Theory of Change Narrative

Use this when: You need to explain, in plain language, why your program's approach should lead to the outcomes you claim.

The prompt:

Write a plain-language theory of change narrative for [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s work on [MISSION AREA]. Structure it as: if we do [KEY ACTIVITIES], then [SHORT-TERM CHANGES] will happen, which leads to [LONG-TERM IMPACT], because [UNDERLYING ASSUMPTION/EVIDENCE]. Base this on: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES ON YOUR APPROACH AND WHY YOU BELIEVE IT WORKS]. Write it as a short narrative paragraph, not just a diagram, suitable for a website "our approach" page.

Pro tip: Ask for the "underlying assumption" to be stated explicitly and separately — funders and evaluators increasingly want to see that you know why you believe your approach works, not just that you believe it.

8. Event Planning & Promotion

Prompt #64 — Plan: Event Run-of-Show Schedule

Use this when: You're planning a fundraising or community event and need a structured minute-by-minute outline.

The prompt:

Build a run-of-show for [EVENT NAME], a [EVENT TYPE, e.g., fundraising gala / community open house] for [ORGANIZATION NAME] on [DATE], expecting [NUMBER] attendees. Include a timed schedule from doors-open to close, covering: welcome/arrival, program elements (speeches, ask, entertainment), and wrap-up. Base the program elements on: [LIST WHAT NEEDS TO HAPPEN, e.g., ED remarks, live ask, silent auction close]. Format as a table: Time, Activity, Owner.

Pro tip: Build in 10-15 minutes of built-in buffer time somewhere in the middle of the run-of-show — events almost always run behind, and having planned slack prevents the ending from getting rushed.

Prompt #65 — Outline: Event Sponsorship Pitch Deck

Use this when: You're seeking event sponsors and need to outline the pitch.

The prompt:

Outline a sponsorship pitch for [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], targeting local businesses. Include suggested sponsorship tiers (e.g., [TIER NAMES/AMOUNTS]) and what benefits each tier would receive (logo placement, mentions, tickets, etc.). Structure as a one-page outline: event overview, audience/reach, sponsorship tiers table, and a closing reason a business should say yes now.

Pro tip: Ask for the audience/reach section to only include numbers you can actually verify (past attendance, email list size, social following) — inflated reach claims are the fastest way to lose a sponsor's trust for next year.

Prompt #66 — Description: Auction Item Descriptions

Use this when: You need compelling item descriptions for a live or silent auction catalog.

The prompt:

Write auction item descriptions for [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s [EVENT NAME] auction. Here are the items: [LIST ITEMS WITH BASIC DETAILS AND DONOR NAMES]. For each item, write a 2-3 sentence description that makes it sound appealing, includes the estimated value, and credits the donor. Format as a numbered catalog.

Pro tip: Ask for the highest-value items to get a slightly longer, more vivid description than smaller items — bidders spend more time reading (and bidding on) items that are described with more detail.

Prompt #67 — Speech: Fundraising Ask Speech for an Event

Use this when: You need remarks for the live ask (paddle raise or fund-a-need) moment at a gala or event.

The prompt:

Write a 3-minute fundraising ask speech for [SPEAKER NAME/ROLE] to deliver at [EVENT NAME] for [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Include a brief story to open (about [STORY TOPIC]), a clear statement of what we're raising money for and why it matters right now, and a specific, confident ask amount of [ASK AMOUNT] with a clear instruction on how to give in the room. Conversational, spoken-word tone — not written like an essay.

Pro tip: Read the speech out loud once before finalizing — AI-written text often has sentences that look fine on paper but are awkward to actually say; ask for a rewrite of any line that trips up the speaker.

Prompt #68 — Email: Post-Event Thank-You and Recap

Use this when: An event just wrapped and you need to thank attendees and share results.

The prompt:

Write a post-event thank-you email to attendees of [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Thank them for coming, share the results (raised [AMOUNT], [NUMBER] attendees, or other key outcome), include a couple of specific highlights or moments from the event, and end with what's next. Warm and celebratory tone, under 200 words.

Pro tip: Ask for a separate, shorter thank-you specifically for sponsors and top donors who attended — they deserve a more personal acknowledgment than the general attendee email.

Prompt #69 — Sheet: Day-Of Volunteer or Staff Briefing Sheet

Use this when: You need to brief day-of volunteers or staff on their roles at an event.

The prompt:

Create a day-of briefing sheet for volunteers/staff working [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Include: arrival time and check-in location, a summary of the event schedule, each role's specific responsibilities based on [LIST ROLES AND TASKS], and a contact number for day-of issues. Format as a clean, easy-to-scan one-pager.

Pro tip: Ask for the most important logistics (arrival time, check-in spot, emergency contact) to be pulled into a bolded box at the top — volunteers skim these sheets fast, and the critical info needs to be impossible to miss.

Prompt #70 — Announcement: Save-the-Date Announcement

Use this when: You're announcing next year's event date early to build anticipation.

The prompt:

Write a short save-the-date announcement for [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], happening [DATE] at [LOCATION]. Keep it brief and exciting — this isn't the full invitation, just enough to get people to hold the date. Suitable for both email and a social media caption version. Under 60 words for each version.

Pro tip: Send the save-the-date at least 8-10 weeks before the event for anything requiring travel or formal wear — people need real lead time to plan around a gala-style event.

Prompt #71 — FAQ: Event FAQ Page

Use this when: You're getting repeated questions about an upcoming event and want a self-serve answer page.

The prompt:

Write an FAQ section for [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], answering these common questions: [LIST QUESTIONS YOU'VE BEEN GETTING, e.g., parking, dress code, ticket refunds, accessibility]. Keep each answer short (1-3 sentences), friendly, and clear. Format as a Q&A list suitable for a website page.

Pro tip: Always include an accessibility question and answer even if no one's asked yet (parking, seating, dietary accommodations) — it signals inclusivity and heads off individual emails asking the same thing.

Prompt #72 — Memo: Event Budget Line-Item Justification

Use this when: You need to justify event expenses to your board or a funder covering event costs.

The prompt:

Write a short justification memo for these event expenses for [EVENT NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]: [PASTE LINE ITEMS AND AMOUNTS]. For each major line item, explain why the cost is reasonable and how it supports the event's fundraising or mission goals. Include a closing note on projected net revenue (total raised minus total costs). Professional, concise tone.

Pro tip: Always present the net revenue number, not just gross funds raised — boards and funders want to see that event costs are proportionate to what the event actually nets the organization.

9. Difficult Conversations & Crisis Comms

Prompt #73 — Response: Declined Grant Follow-Up to a Funder

Use this when: A funder turned you down (a grant rejection) and you want to keep the relationship warm for next time.

The prompt:

Write a gracious response to [FUNDER NAME] after being declined for a grant supporting [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Thank them for considering us, ask (politely) if they'd be open to feedback on the proposal or a future conversation, and express interest in applying again in the future. Keep it short, professional, and free of any disappointment or defensiveness. Under 120 words.

Pro tip: Always ask for feedback in this email, even if you don't expect a detailed answer — funders remember grantees who handle "no" gracefully and ask good questions, and it often improves your odds next cycle.

Prompt #74 — Response: Reply to an Upset or Complaining Donor

Use this when: A donor is upset or filing a complaint about how their gift was used, a mistake in acknowledgment, or a program decision.

The prompt:

A donor named [DONOR NAME] is upset about [SITUATION, e.g., a delayed thank-you letter / how funds were used / a program change]. Write a response that acknowledges their concern genuinely (without being overly apologetic if we didn't actually do anything wrong), explains the situation clearly, and offers a specific next step to resolve or address it. Calm, respectful, non-defensive tone. Under 200 words.

Pro tip: Have someone senior review this before sending if the donor is a major or long-term giver — the stakes of getting the tone right go up significantly with your most important relationships.

Prompt #75 — Announcement: Program Cut or Change Announcement

Use this when: You need to announce a program is ending, shrinking, or changing significantly, to staff, participants, or the community.

The prompt:

Write an announcement that [ORGANIZATION NAME] is [ENDING/CHANGING] [PROGRAM NAME], intended for [AUDIENCE, e.g., program participants / the community / staff]. Explain the reason honestly in plain language (without excessive corporate-speak), what this means for people currently affected, and what support or alternatives are available. Compassionate, direct, and honest tone — avoid vague language that obscures what's actually happening. 200-300 words.

Pro tip: Never let an AI-drafted version of this go out without a human who deeply understands the situation reviewing every sentence — the framing of a program cut affects real people's trust in your organization, and precision matters more than speed here.

Prompt #76 — Statement: Response to Public Criticism or a Negative News Story

Use this when: Your organization is facing public criticism, a negative article, or online backlash and needs a press statement.

The prompt:

Draft a public response statement from [ORGANIZATION NAME] addressing [SITUATION/ CRITICISM, briefly describe]. The statement should acknowledge the concern raised, provide factual context or correction where needed (using: [PASTE RELEVANT FACTS]), and state what we're doing in response if applicable. Calm, non-defensive, factual tone — avoid language that sounds dismissive or combative. 150-200 words.

Pro tip: Treat this as a first draft only — for anything involving real reputational risk, have this reviewed by your ED, board chair, and (for serious situations) legal counsel before it goes anywhere public.

Prompt #77 — Communication: Layoff or Restructuring Announcement

Use this when: You need to communicate a staff layoff or organizational restructuring, internally or to stakeholders.

The prompt:

Write an internal announcement to staff at [ORGANIZATION NAME] about [RESTRUCTURING/ LAYOFF SITUATION, briefly describe]. Explain the reason for the change honestly, what it means for the team, and what support is being offered to those affected. Compassionate, clear, and direct — no corporate euphemisms. Separately, draft a short external version for board/funders that respects affected staff's privacy while being transparent about organizational changes.

Pro tip: Have HR and legal review any layoff communication before it's sent — this is one of the highest-stakes communications a nonprofit sends, and an AI draft should only ever be a starting point here, never the final version.

Prompt #78 — Notification: Data Breach or Privacy Incident Notice

Use this when: A privacy or data incident has occurred and you need to notify affected individuals.

The prompt:

Draft a notification to [AFFECTED GROUP, e.g., donors / program participants] about [INCIDENT DESCRIPTION, briefly describe what happened]. Explain what happened in plain language, what information may have been affected, what we're doing about it, and what steps they can take to protect themselves. Serious, transparent, non-alarmist tone. 200-250 words.

Pro tip: This communication likely has legal notification requirements depending on your state and the type of data involved — treat this prompt as a drafting starting point only, and have legal counsel confirm both the content and the timing before anything is sent.

Prompt #79 — Response: Donor Request to Redirect or Refund a Gift

Use this when: A donor is requesting their gift be redirected to a different program or refunded entirely.

The prompt:

A donor named [DONOR NAME] has asked to [REDIRECT THEIR GIFT TO A DIFFERENT PROGRAM / HAVE IT REFUNDED], originally given to [ORIGINAL PROGRAM/FUND]. Write a response addressing their request professionally, explaining our policy on gift redirection/refunds ([DESCRIBE YOUR ACTUAL POLICY]), and offering the appropriate next step based on that policy. Respectful and solution-oriented tone, under 150 words.

Pro tip: Know your restricted-gift policy before writing this — if the original gift was restricted to a specific fund, redirecting it may have real accounting and donor-intent implications that need a policy answer, not just a friendly one.

Prompt #80 — Apology: Apology for an Organizational Mistake

Use this when: Your organization made a genuine mistake (a missed deadline, an error in communication, a service failure) and owes someone a real apology.

The prompt:

Write a sincere apology to [RECIPIENT, e.g., a donor / a partner organization / a program participant] for [MISTAKE, briefly describe what happened]. Take clear ownership without over-explaining or making excuses, state specifically what we're doing to fix it or prevent it from happening again, and keep the tone humble and direct. Under 150 words.

Pro tip: Cut any sentence that starts with "unfortunately" or shifts blame to circumstances — a real apology owns the mistake in the first sentence, and the AI will sometimes soften into passive language unless you specifically ask it to avoid that.

Prompt #81 — Script: Difficult Conversation Prep Script

Use this when: You need to prepare for an in-person difficult conversation, like addressing underperformance or a board conflict.

The prompt:

Help me prepare for a difficult conversation with [PERSON'S ROLE, e.g., a staff member / a board member] about [ISSUE, briefly describe]. Give me a simple script structure: how to open the conversation, 2-3 key points I need to make clearly, how to invite their perspective, and how to close with clear next steps. Keep the tone direct but respectful — this is a private prep tool, not something I'll read verbatim.

Pro tip: Practice this out loud once before the actual conversation — scripts read differently than they sound, and saying it aloud once will surface anything that feels stiff or unnatural so you can adjust before the real conversation.

Bonus: 10 Power Prompts

These are longer, multi-step prompts that chain several tasks together. Use them when you want to turn one input into a whole batch of deliverables at once.

Power Prompt #82 — Plan: One Program Description Into a Month of Content

Use this when: You have one solid program description and need a full month of marketing material from it.

The prompt:

I'm going to give you a description of one program at [ORGANIZATION NAME]: [PASTE PROGRAM DESCRIPTION]. From this single description, generate: (1) 4 social media captions (one per week, different angles: a stat, a story, a behind-the-scenes moment, and a call to volunteer/donate), (2) one newsletter section (150 words), (3) one email appeal tied to this program (200 words), and (4) 3 possible headlines for a blog post about it. Label each piece clearly.

Pro tip: Run this once per program per quarter — it turns your existing program knowledge into an entire content backlog in one sitting instead of writing everything from scratch each time you need a post.

Power Prompt #83 — Draft: Full Grant Proposal Builder

Use this when: You have your program facts gathered and need a complete first-draft proposal, not just one section.

The prompt:

I'm applying for a grant from [FUNDER NAME] for [PROGRAM NAME] at [ORGANIZATION NAME], requesting [AMOUNT]. Here's what you need to know: [PASTE MISSION, PROGRAM DETAILS, TARGET POPULATION, OUTCOMES DATA, BUDGET NOTES]. Draft a full first-pass proposal with these sections in order: executive summary, statement of need, program description, goals and measurable outcomes, budget narrative, and organizational capacity. Flag any section where you had to make assumptions so I can fill in real details.

Pro tip: Don't submit this draft as-is — use it as a skeleton to fill in with your organization's verified facts, and always match the final structure to the funder's actual required sections and word limits.

Power Prompt #84 — Kit: Full Fundraising Campaign Kit

Use this when: You're launching a campaign and need every piece of collateral at once — not just emails.

The prompt:

I'm launching a fundraising campaign called [CAMPAIGN NAME] with a goal of [GOAL AMOUNT] to fund [PURPOSE], running from [START DATE] to [END DATE]. Build me a full campaign kit: (1) a campaign one-line pitch, (2) a 4-email sequence (launch, story, progress update, final push), (3) 5 social media captions spaced across the campaign timeline, (4) a website/landing page paragraph, and (5) a thank-you email template for when someone gives. Label each clearly and keep messaging consistent across all pieces.

Pro tip: Save this entire output as one document per campaign — reusing last year's campaign kit as a starting point for this prompt cuts your planning time dramatically on annual campaigns like Giving Tuesday or year-end.

Power Prompt #85 — Generator: Annual Report Content Generator

Use this when: It's annual report season and you need most of the narrative content drafted from raw numbers and notes.

The prompt:

Help me draft the core content for [ORGANIZATION NAME]'s [YEAR] annual report. Here's our raw data and notes: [PASTE KEY NUMBERS, PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS, FINANCIAL SUMMARY NOTES, ONE OR TWO STORIES]. Generate: (1) a "Year in Review" narrative (300 words), (2) a "By the Numbers" section formatted as 5-6 standalone stats with one-line context each, (3) a donor/funder thank-you section, and (4) a forward-looking closing statement about next year's priorities. Keep tone consistent and factual throughout.

Pro tip: Gather all your raw numbers and stories into one document before running this prompt — the quality of an annual report draft depends entirely on how complete the input data is, not on how the prompt is worded.

Power Prompt #86 — Package: New Program Launch Package

Use this when: You're launching a brand-new program and need everything from the pitch to the promotion built at once.

The prompt:

[ORGANIZATION NAME] is launching a new program called [PROGRAM NAME] to address [PROBLEM/NEED], serving [TARGET POPULATION]. Here's what we know so far: [PASTE PROGRAM DETAILS, HOW IT WORKS, WHO RUNS IT]. Generate: (1) a one-paragraph program description for our website, (2) a launch announcement email to our supporter list, (3) a launch social media post, (4) an internal one-pager for staff/board explaining the program, and (5) 3 potential outcome metrics we could start tracking from day one.

Pro tip: Use the outcome metrics list (item 5) as a starting point for a conversation with your program team about what you'll actually measure — deciding this before launch, not six months in, makes your first grant report or annual report far easier to write.

Power Prompt #87 — Sequence: Full-Year Donor Journey Email Series

Use this when: You want a complete automated email sequence covering a donor's entire first year, not just one email.

The prompt:

Build a full first-year donor journey email sequence for a new donor to [ORGANIZATION NAME] who just made their first gift of [TYPICAL FIRST GIFT AMOUNT]. Include: (1) immediate thank-you (send day 1), (2) impact update with no ask (send ~6 weeks), (3) a second touchpoint — a story or update (send ~4 months), (4) a soft ask to become a monthly donor (send ~7 months), (5) a year-end/ anniversary appeal (send ~11-12 months). For each, give the send timing, subject line, and full email body.

Pro tip: Load this sequence into your email platform's automation once, tied to "date of first gift," and every new donor going forward automatically gets a thoughtful first year of stewardship without you writing a single extra email.

Power Prompt #88 — Package: Board Meeting Prep Package

Use this when: You need everything ready for an upcoming board meeting — not just the agenda.

The prompt:

I have a board meeting for [ORGANIZATION NAME] on [DATE]. Here's what's happened since our last meeting: [PASTE ROUGH NOTES ON PROGRAMS, FINANCES, FUNDRAISING, CHALLENGES]. Generate: (1) a full agenda with time blocks, (2) the ED's written report to the board, (3) 3 discussion questions to pose to the board on our biggest open decision, and (4) a short pre-meeting email to send the board with these materials attached. Keep everything consistent and pulling from the same set of facts.

Pro tip: Send the pre-meeting materials at least 3-5 days ahead of the actual meeting — board members who receive materials the day before rarely read them closely, and your meeting quality drops as a result.

Power Prompt #89 — Plan: Crisis Communication Response Plan

Use this when: A situation has just broken (negative press, an internal incident, a public complaint) and you need a full response plan fast, not just one statement.

The prompt:

A situation has come up at [ORGANIZATION NAME]: [DESCRIBE THE SITUATION HONESTLY AND IN DETAIL]. Help me build a response plan: (1) a short internal message to staff/board explaining what happened and how we're handling it, (2) a public statement (if one is warranted) that's factual and non-defensive, (3) a list of 3-5 questions we should expect from media, donors, or the public, with a one-line answer to each, and (4) a recommendation on which audiences need to hear from us directly versus only if asked.

Pro tip: Treat every output from this prompt as a draft for your leadership team and, for serious situations, legal counsel to review — the value here is having a fast, organized starting point under pressure, not a final answer to publish unreviewed.

Power Prompt #90 — Combo: Grant Report Plus Renewal Ask

Use this when: You're writing a required grant report and want to use the same momentum to make the case for renewed funding.

The prompt:

I need to write a grant outcomes report to [FUNDER NAME] for their [AMOUNT] gift to [PROGRAM NAME], and I also want to lay groundwork for asking them to renew or increase support next cycle. Here's our data: [PASTE OUTCOMES, CHALLENGES, NUMBERS]. Draft: (1) the formal outcomes report (400-500 words, following standard report structure), and (2) a separate, shorter closing paragraph I could add or mention in a follow-up conversation that makes a soft case for continued or increased support based on the results shown in the report.

Pro tip: Keep the renewal language out of the formal report itself unless the funder's report template explicitly invites it — use it instead in a follow-up call or cover email so the report reads as accountability, not a pitch.

Power Prompt #91 — Package: New Employee First-Week Orientation

Use this when: You're onboarding a new staff member and want a complete, organized first-week orientation package built from your organization's basic facts.

The prompt:

Build a first-week orientation package for a new [ROLE] joining [ORGANIZATION NAME]. Here's our basic organizational info: [PASTE MISSION, PROGRAMS, ORG STRUCTURE, KEY POLICIES]. Generate: (1) a one-page "who we are" overview, (2) a glossary of internal terms/acronyms they'll hear in their first week, (3) a suggested first-week schedule (who to meet, what to review), and (4) a list of 10 smart questions they could ask their manager to ramp up faster. Format each section clearly.

Pro tip: Reuse this exact prompt for every new hire, updating only the [ROLE] and any role-specific policy notes — a consistent onboarding experience saves supervisor time and helps new staff feel oriented faster in their first week.

Prompt-Writing Cheat Sheet

The 5-part framework for writing your own prompts

Once you're comfortable with the prompts in this pack, you can write your own using this framework. Every strong prompt has five parts:

1. Role — Tell the AI who to act as. This sets the expertise and tone.

Example: "Act as a development director at a mid-sized nonprofit."

2. Task — State exactly what you want it to produce, in one clear sentence.

Example: "Write a thank-you email to a first-time donor."

3. Context — Give it the specific facts it needs: your mission, the audience, relevant numbers or details. This is the part most people skip, and it's the part that matters most.

Example: "The donor gave $50 to our after-school tutoring program. Our donors are mostly local parents and retirees."

4. Format — Specify how you want the output structured: length, format (email, list, table), and any sections it must include.

Example: "Keep it under 150 words. Include a subject line."

5. Constraints — Set the boundaries: tone to use or avoid, things not to say, reading level, what NOT to include.

Example: "Warm but not overly formal. Don't use the phrase 'makes a difference.'"

Two full examples using the framework

Example A — Donor Thank-You

Act as a development officer at a nonprofit food bank. Write a thank-you email to a donor who gave $75 to our weekend backpack program, which sends food home with kids for the weekend. Our donors tend to be local families who care about kids in their community. Keep it under 150 words, include a subject line, and mention that $75 covers backpacks for 5 kids for a month. Keep the tone heartfelt but not overly formal, and avoid generic phrases like "makes a difference."

Example B — Volunteer Recruitment Post

Act as a volunteer coordinator at an animal shelter. Write a social media post recruiting weekend dog-walking volunteers. Our shelter is often short-staffed on weekends, and the role involves 2-hour shifts walking and socializing dogs, no experience required. Keep it under 130 words, written for Instagram, with a clear signup link placeholder at the end. Tone should be upbeat and a little playful — this is a fun, low-barrier way to get involved, not a serious ask.

Remember

A generic prompt gets a generic answer. The five-part framework works because Context is where you put what makes your organization, your donors, and your voice different from every other nonprofit using the same AI tool. Never skip it.

This pack was built for nonprofit staff who need great AI outputs without becoming AI experts. Copy, customize the brackets, and adapt every prompt to sound like your organization — the AI gives you the first draft, but your voice should always have the final word.
